SURRENDER TO BRITAIN IN HOUSE

By ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Bunker Hill was declared a failure, Yorktown a mistake, and this country related to its original position as a province of the British crown by a house vote of 247 to 161, a majority of 86, on the bill to repeal free Panama Canal tolls to American coastwise ships.

England should now consider, and doubtless will, what reward is due from her to the timid, knee-bending President Wilson.

In the debate which precedes this national disgrace the champ Clark speech was the master effort. Whether or no it convinced Congress, it will at least convince the country. Clear, strong, honest, full of courage, it was a telling contrast to the cold, mercenary language of Mr. Wilson in which nothing stood out except the Wilson timidity.

That was the worst thing about Mr. Wilson's canal utterance. Its one arrival was to cowardice as one argument fear. We must give England her way, and though the way he wrong we must pay for the right, these $40,000,000; we must pay those annual $30,000,000 required to maintain

And then perforce we must timely operate it in accord with England's will and under England's dominating thumb.

AFRAID OF EVERYBODY.

Why? Because—according to the late-hung, ghost-shaken Mr. Wilson—we are afraid of England, afraid of Japan, afraid of Mexico, afraid of everybody. After so abject an utterance from its White House it needed but a speech as Speaker Clark's to restore the country's self-respect.

In these Washington canal days we have no trouble in determining a man's politics. You can pick out the Republicans by their smiles.

Mr. Wilson in his canal cowardice is killing his party.

One of the greatest Democrats of the country put the business into so small a compass that you might tuck it away in a thimble.

"VOTING PARTY OUT OF POWER."

"This canal question is of such patriotic importance that it overshadows all minor issues," he said. "It is bringing the Republicans and the Progressives together and making them forget their smaller differences in the face of a threatened danger to their country. The menace of the Progressives and the Republicans are united the Democrats are defeated.

"Also, this united party will not only be made up of Republicans and Progressives but with them will be every Democrat who considers patriotism of more importance than

The Democrats who vote for the bill of the free tolls measure are doing their country into disgrace and their party out of power. More, they will be very little patronage Democrats since the Republicans are given victory. The Democratic party can only be saved by abandoning this and, accurate and un-American surrender of the canal to England and falling into line with the patriotic sentiment of the people at large."

TORREON SAID TO HAVE FALLEN TO VILLA'S MEN

MEXICO CITY, April 1.—General Javier de Moure, at the head of 4,000 Federal troops, is steadily fighting his way to Torreon, according to official reports received here today. The latest advices stated that he had arrived safely at San Pedro de las Colonias, about forty miles east of Torreon, and was pushing on to that city.

JUAREZ, April 1.—That Torreon has fallen is the general belief among Constitutionalist officers here today.

They think, however, that General Villa is delaying the announcement of his victory until he can also report the complete defeat of Federal reinforcements sent from Monterey and Saltillo to the aid of General Velasco, the government commander at Torreon.

FIND INJURED MAN IN RACING CAR WITH GIRLS

Two Lynn patrolmen stopped a speeding auto in Houghton square, Lynn, just after midnight this morning, and found that Michael J. Sullivan, an occupant, had a broken shoulder and a broken rib. There were three other men and three girls in the car. Chauffeur Clarence H. Ellis, of No. 8 Holbrook street, Reading, said Sullivan leaned out of the car to speak to him, his hat fell off, and in grabbing for it he fell out of the car. Ellis said he was speeding to a doctor, and after Dr. Thomas F. Grady had treated Sullivan's injuries he was allowed to go.

Those in the car were Ellis, Sullivan, who lives at No. 133 Elliot street; John P. Shea, of No. 75 Carver street; James H. Murray, of The Marlboro House; Edna Cummings, of No. 9 Greenwich park; Alice Ellison, of No. 524 Columbus avenue, and Rose LeClair, of No. 74 Rutland street. They had been to the Suntaug Inn.

WIRELESS CALL FOR HELP FROM HUB STEAMER

The steamship Herman Frasch is drifting, practically helpless, off Hatteras, according to S. O. S. calls she sent out early today which were picked up by high-powered wireless receiving stations along the Massachusetts coast.

One message reports that the steamer's steering gear has been disabled, but that it is hoped to keep the vessel out of a perilous position off the Capes until assistance reaches her.

A wireless message picked up from the revenue cutter Onondaga says she is making all possible speed to reach the crippled ship. Other craft are also believed to be on their way to render aid.

The Herman Frasch is a schooner-rigged steel screw steamer of 2,341 tons. She was built at the Fore River Ship Building Yards at Quincy in 1910, is owned by the Union Sulphur Company of New York, and is engaged in coastwise trade.

GIRLS CAN'T SEE FIGHT IN ARMORY

Girls and women are barred from the boxing bouts arranged by Company E, Eighth Regiment, M. V. M., at the Cambridge armory tomorrow night, because so much talk has been made about feminine spectators at a fight event.

Announcement barring girls and women was made today by Captain William J. Greene of Company E, a Cambridge lawyer.

This boxing night is for the benefit of Company E's fund to defray expenses of the coming trip to the dedication of the Fusiliers' armory at St. John, N. B. The main event is to be Jack (Twin) Sullivan vs. Porky Flynn, with lively preliminaries.

Arrangement was made to let the officers bring their wives, sisters, sweethearts and such women folks. Ladies of the military set were pleasantly thrilled at the prospect of seeing pugilism, maul one another.

Arrangements were made, too—in order that this benefit might be a financial success—to admit the small pupils, for a price, under the good old "Associate member" plan. The fight committee's almost got writer's cramp signing "Associate member" tickets.

Lastly, a joyous rumor rippled around town that "Associate members" could bring their wives, sweethearts, et cetera. Many a young Cambridge lady was saying proudly:

"Bill's gonna take me to the armory tonight."

This became "2 much," as Little Bobbie says. The petticoat line was drawn. The officers' women folks lose. The fight night will be a stag party only.

Tenants Begin to Quit Avery Street

$1,500 Robbery by Second Story Men

Second story workers early today entered the home of Sydney Harwood, a Boston wool machinery manufacturer, living at No. 943 Waverly avenue, Newton, and stole jewels worth $1,500. Among the missing articles were a pearl necklace, a diamond and ruby ring, a diamond pin, a pearl pin and a ruby pin.

MAD MAN SCARE IN MEDFORD

Mrs. Rosella N. Gardner of No. 5 Vista avenue, Medford, and in business as a beauty specialist at No. 149 Tremont street, telephoned to the Medford police early today that an insane man was trying to get into her house, and when the officers came they took the man in custody.

"I was scared stiff, Bess," inquired Mrs. Gardner. "But I'm a descendant of President Buchanan, and a relative of President Taft, and I suppose that's why I was able to keep my head."

The man Mrs. Gardner thought insane is E. C. Smith, who lives in New Hampshire somewhere. He told the police the last thing he remembered was visiting friends in Stoneham Monday night.

Mrs. Gardner saw the man early today standing by a brook which cuts the field in front of her house. "He threw away his coat," she said, "threw his vest into the brook, took his shoes in his hand, then lay down with his face in the water. After a little while he came toward the house and up on the porch. My little toy dog began to bark. The man rang the bell and demanded to get in. Then he tried to break in the door.

"I had phoned the police, and I barricaded the door. After a while the man went toward a house where workmen were building an addition. They stopped him. He said someone had stolen his coat and hat. We afterward found them hanging on a bush in the field.

"They kept him talking until the police came."

$3,000 Theatre Fire Loss in Dedham

Three thousand dollars' damage was done when a thickly settled tenement district was frightened by a two-alarm fire which burned out the stage and stage fixtures in the Star moving picture theatre on Milton street, in East Dedham, this morning. The theatre, which was empty at the time, is owned by Miss Hannah Greenwood of East Dedham.

Chicago Packers Come to Aid of Siegel and Vogel

NEW YORK, April 1.—That Chicago packing interests and friends of Henry Siegel and Frank E. Vogel would advance $1,450,000 to pay the depositors of the defunct Siegel Bank in full, provided criminal prosecution of the two men was dropped, was the intimation made today at the examination of Vogel before United States Commissioner Gilchrist. It came from Levy Mayer of Chicago, counsel for Mrs. Vogel, who is the daughter of the late Nelson Morris.

At the conclusion of the examination Attorney Mayer said:

"I came here as the representative of Mrs. Vogel and of many of the important business men of Chicago to see what can be done toward straightening out the tangle. Friends of Siegel and Vogel have raised $450,000. On top of this the business men of Chicago, including the packers and other large interests have subscribed $1,000,000 more.

"The people who put up this money do not want to send good cash after bad, and if these men are prosecuted and put in jail the money will not be given to the depositors."

Judge Hamlin today granted Siegel and Vogel one more week in which to plead to the indictments brought against them.

Woman Swallows Mercury; Friends Call It Accident

Mrs. Helen Carlton, thirty-two, was taken to the Relief Hospital from No. 16 Howard street, West End, early today suffering from bichloride of mercury poisoning. The police say she took the poison with suicidal intent, but friends declare Mrs. Carlton thought it would cure a headache. Joseph Carlton, her husband, later called at the Relief Hospital station and spent some time at the bedside of his wife.

WOMAN UNMASKS HUSBAND

Sensational charges by Mrs. Marie Vaughn Wilde Siegel, who is suing Henry Siegel for divorce, that he may have "very large hidden assets," led to immediate action, today by the office of District Attorney Pelletier.

An investigation was at once started to find out whether or not any of these "concealed funds" might be in Boston.

Upon the outcome of this hunt depended the future procedure of the District Attorney's office, it was stated.

Among other amazing accusations, Mrs. Siegel, society woman, feted by British royalty, declares that she believes it will ultimately come to light that her husband has "very large stock investments in corporations other than the mercantile companies directly controlled by him."

She says that he has had a large income from "these and other investments."

GAVE JAIL WARNING.

Mrs. Siegel says she once warned her husband he was "facing jail." This was after she learned of his dealings with the money of depositors in the banks in New York and Boston, she says.

"He raged like a madman and treated me shamefully, worse if possible than ever," she states.

She adds that once at a dinner party at which Siegel's partner, Frank Vogel, was present, her husband made light of her warnings.

The wife claims that Siegel "victimized" her and other members of the family and invested her son-in-law, an Italian nobleman, to make poor investments.

"I would gladly restore to these poor dependents their losses," she says, "but apparently I am left by this dishonorable man in the same situation financially as the other people whom he victimized."

In a remarkable statement made through her counsel, Mrs. Siegel charges further:

That she believes her husband induced her to go abroad so that she would not "divulge her information of his illegal operations."

That he spent great sums of money on various women.

That he insured his employes as "a good ad."

That he ruined the business of relatives by adulterating olive oil.

That he induced her son-in-law's family to invest every loose penny they had in his bankrupt enterprises.

That he filled her life with tribulations.

That he did not settle one penny on her daughter, Georgine Wilde, who married the Count Dentice di Frasso, or on his own daughter, Julia, who married Tyrell William Cavendish, a wealthy Englishman.

That he gave her only $24,000 to maintain their "elaborate establishments."

HOTEL MAY BRING SUIT.

In her divorce suit Mrs. Siegel named a Miss Smith, a trained nurse, a Mrs. Eddy of Boston, and an "unknown woman." As a result of her mention of the Hotel Netherlands in New York in connection with her charges of misconduct, it developed today that the hotel has under advisement a suit for damages against the wife.

It was announced that after a siege of several hours at the Hotel Majestic in New York, where Siegel has apartments, a process server had finally succeeded in reaching Siegel with papers in his wife's divorce suit. He was quoted as saying to would-be interviewers:

"Oh, hell, there is nothing to it sir."

When he was told what Mrs. Siegel had said of his dealings with moneys of depositors, he replied:

"You don't mean it!"

When pressed for an answer, he retorted:

"Nothing to say, nothing to say."

This is Mrs. Siegel's statement:

MRS. SIEGEL'S STATEMENT.

"There have been so many misstatements in the public press recently, not only concerning my divorce action, but concerning my prior status, that I feel called upon to make the following statement:

"I came to New York to visit my first husband's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. George Cotton Chase, wholesale tea merchant of Front street, whom I well knew both socially and financially and at whose luxurious home in West Fifty-eighth street, Mr. Siegel and I were married on April 24, 1906. I was first introduced to Mr. Siegel by friends at a dinner party. He never offered nor did I accept employment in his stores. My married life with Mr. Siegel was full of trials and tribulations. Suffice it to say that I endeavored in every way to shield and protect him from his own weaknesses and his lack of consideration for the feelings and rights of others.

"Several years ago I learned incidentally of the dealings of Henry Siegel with the moneys of depositors in his banks and I immediately remonstrated and warned him, as I thought that it was my duty to tell him he was facing jail. He raged like a mad man and treated me shamefully, worse, if possible, than ever. This continued for several weeks, when he changed his attitude toward me, and at a dinner party at which Frank Vogel was present, he made light of my objections, and endeavored to convince me that I had been misled and misinformed, and that I was unjustly suspecting him, whereas he was a noble and honest citizen, seeking only the welfare and advantage of those with whom he was connected.

ALLEGES MISTREATMENT.

"Thereafter Mr. Siegel continued again to mistreat me in a variety of ways, which it is not necessary now to divulge, and continually suggested that we should be separated. And from what I have learned in the last six weeks I now believe that he was actuated throughout with the evident intention of having me leave the country so that I would not divulge my information of his illegal operations or reproach him further with my suggestions concerning the same. In any event, I finally left for Paris upon his express promise and agreement to provide for me. This promise was kept for a time and then discontinued, and upon the face of the situation it looked as though I was in the same position as any other creditor.

"The statement made by Mr. Siegel and others in the public press that he had furnished me with vast moneys and that I wasted his funds and led him into extravagances, both here and abroad, is all absolutely without foundation. I am practically without any money or property whatsoever and have been compelled to institute this divorce action in order to protect my rights and to place the matter before the courts, so that my rights as a wife may be determined and enforced. My books will show—and I have only one set—that in no year, even when Mr. Siegel was accredited with having an income exceeding several hundred thousand dollars a year, did he give me over $24,000 a year with which to maintain the expenses of his elaborate establishments.

"From what I have now learned

Now Believes He Has Considerable Assets Hidden in Investments.

controlled by him, and while he has had a large income from these and other investments he has throughout been decidedly parsimonious with me, as all of my friends well know.

"Mr. Siegel attempts to account for some of his so-called 'losses' by the statement that he made settlements upon my daughter and his daughter on their marriages. This is absolutely untrue. He settled on neither girl one penny, but he gave them verbal promises. Not only did Mr Siegel fail to make such settlement on our married daughters, but on the contrary induced my son-in-law's family to invest in his bankrupt enterprises every loose penny they had, and secondly, induced them, as they owned extensive olive orchards, to sign a seven-year contract to ship all the oil they could produce.

"They went into business on the strength of this contract, borrowed money from the Sectional Bank, undertook tremendous financial responsibilities, and it was subsequently necessary for them to sue him before I could pay them a cent three years after the first shipment.

RUINED REPUTATION.

"They did not dare stop shipping the oil to him, fearing that he would sue them for breaking the contract, and in the meantime, after Henry Siegel had worked up a big reputation on their good oil, he began to doctor it up with all sorts of cheap, nasty substitutes, and in so doing ruined the reputation of their firm.

"Henry Siegel has done so many immoral things within the past few years, that I could not enumerate them, and has acted with reckless disregard of his moral responsibility, not only to me as his wife, but to the thousands of persons with whom he has come in contact. He insured his employes and then referred to it jokingly as a 'good ad,' and apparently in all his business dealings he was not actuated by any sense of honor.

"Personally, I deeply deplore the situation of the thousands of poor depositors who have trusted their moneys to the alleged 'bank' which, as I understand, was not even inspected by the State examiners. If it were in my power, I would gladly restore to these poor people their losses, but apparently I am left by this dishonorable man in the same situation financially as the other people whom he has victimized."

Managing Director Foran of the Hotel Netherlands denied that it was responsible for Mrs. Siegel's charge to be true that her husband was guilty of misconduct with a Miss Smith at the hotel. He said:

DEFENDS HOTEL NAME.

"Henry Siegel had an apartment here from August 25, 1910, until February 15, 1911. It consisted of a parlor, bedroom and bathroom. During the period that he retained this apartment Mr. Siegel's daughter, Mrs. Cavendish, and her maid arrived from Europe and also occupied the apartment in this hotel.

"Mrs. Cavendish was absolutely the only woman to visit Mr. Siegel's apartment. If there had been any other woman visiting it, even to get or receive mail or telegrams, we should have known it. There has been at no time any claim left unanswering the description given by Mrs. Siegel in the house.

"There have been persons bearing the name, notably the president of the New York Central lines, and his family. But no such person as Mrs. Siegel complains of has ever gained or ever sought admission. Mr. Siegel is not such a fool as to bring or to try to bring a woman into this or any other first-class hotel."

SIEGEL COUNSEL SILENT.

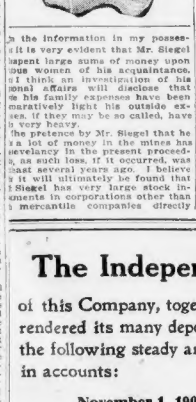
Stanchfield & Levy, counsel for Siegel, and for Vogel also, were informed of the charges made against Siegel by his wife, but Louis S. Levy, who personally has been representing Siegel, declined to discuss the matter. He sent word that he "had not heard about it." That answer likewise was made to questions whether Mrs. Siegel's claims for alimony, should they be granted, would have priority over the claims of the mercantile creditors and the bank depositors.

Mrs. Siegel's suit will not affect in any way the depositors' money in the hands of Henry Melville, receiver of Henry Siegel & Co., bankers, according to Frederick Pomeroy, counsel for the receiver. Mr. Proskauer said that he was able to make an unqualified statement to that effect.



...n the information in my possession it is very evident that Mr. Siegel ...pent large sums of money upon ...ous women of his acquaintance. ...I think an investigation of his ...onal affairs will disclose that ...e his family expenses have been ...paratively light his outside ex...ses. If they may be so called, have ...n very heavy.

...The pretence by Mr. Siegel that he ...s a lot of money in the mines has ...nevelancy in the present proceed...s, as such loss, if it occurred, was ...least several years ago. # "400" CAUGHT IN 'VANDERBILT BROKER' CRASH

NEW YORK, April 1.—The list of creditors of the bankrupt firm of H. B. Hollins & Co., filed in Federal Court, reads like a leaf from the social register of Europe and the United States. Titled women, society leaders, women financiers and men of large means predominate among the creditors caught in the $6,000,000 crash.

In Wall Street H. B. Hollins was called William K. Vanderbilt's broker, and was known as a personal friend of the late J. P. Morgan. At the time of the Hollins failure last November it was said that previously the firm had received aid on several occasions from Vanderbilt and Morgan.

SOCIAL WORLD CAUGHT.

But the social world, rather than the financial, appears to have been attracted by H. B. Hollins & Co. Almost at the head of the list are Lady Natica Lister-Kaye, of Paris; Miss Nancy Cunard, daughter of Sir Bache Cunard; the Duchess of Manchester estate; Emile Vanaga, Paris; Mrs. Rose Gnuva, Ausburg, Bavaria; Mrs. Grace Aull Sorg, Mrs. Ada Sorg Drouillard of No. 1014 Fifth avenue, and numerous others in various parts of the United States and Europe.

The contracts of fortune stand out boldly in several instances among the men affected by the failure. Linked with the names of J. P. Morgan and W. K. Vanderbilt is that of Morris Hillquit, the Socialist leader. Senator William Alden Smith, of Michigan, and Jose Antonio Frias, friend of former Governor Sulzer, are also included in the register.

From the list of secured and unsecured creditors it appears that many of Hollins' American friends took the precaution to obtain security, while aristocratic friends across the sea are mainly unsecured.

SECURED CREDITORS.

Among the secured creditors and the amounts are the following: J. P. Morgan & Co., $100,233; estate of J. P. Morgan, $399,350; W. K. Vanderbilt, $546,596; Duchess of Manchester estate, $253,541; Cunliffe Brothers, of London, $497,521; Chase National Bank, $731,800; Corn Exchange Bank, $350,251; Equitable Trust Company, $420,250; First National Bank, $175,340; Hanover National Bank, $231,485; International Banking Corporation of London, $158,729; Kings County Trust, $125,557; Metropolitan Trust, $277,341.

Among the unsecured creditors are: Sir Bache Cunard, $1,142; Nancy Cunard, $435; estate of W. H. Havemeyer, $16,152; Lady Natica Lister-Kaye, Paris, $9,402; Duchess of Manchester estate, $1,753; Emile Vanaga, Paris, $1,402; Eugene, Zimmerman, Cincinnati, $34,163.

Among the women victims are Mrs. Grace Aull Sorg, $140,000; Mrs. Ada Sorg Drouillard, $62,400; Virginia Hollins, Venice, Italy, $334.

Miss Dorothy Forbes, the well known Back Bay society horsewoman, today began her duties as a director of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

In Dr. Rowley's report he stated: "Through the activity and interest of Miss Dorothy Forbes, No. 107 Commonwealth avenue, this city, there has just been organized the Boston branch of the M. S. P. C. A. The purpose of this branch is to enlist the co-operation of the largest number of people possible in the society's work and to lead them to observe particularly such horses as should be reported to the society's headquarters because of cruelty and neglect or as worn-out and so entitled to a merciful release from work. The branch has its own attractive badge, its cards of membership and instruction."

Miss Forbes said today, her work for the society would not involve personal observation or reporting of cases of bad harnessing, blinding, checking or such details of cruelty to horses as are commonly seen on the streets, but would be confined to the general supervisory activities outlined in the report of President Rowley.

ASQUITH NOW IN CHARGE OF ARMY BUREAU

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, April 1.—Premier Asquith took full charge of the British army today. He summoned General Sir Arthur Paget, commander of the Irish garrisons, to the war office and the two men were in conference there for several hours.

General Paget was summoned from Ireland to give the Premier, who is also Secretary of State for War, a full report on the disaffection that is said to exist among the officers and men in his garrison. Recent revelations have shown that this was more widespread than the government had supposed.

While the Premier and General Paget were in conference the Globe announced that the taking of a vote in second reading of the home rule for Ireland bill had been postponed until today. This announcement, which the Globe stated was made on high authority, caused great surprise, because the original program of the government had called for a division last evening at the close of debate on the measure.

NAPLES, April 1.—Three hundred and fifty American tourists who arrived here aboard the steamship Cleveland, Boston bound, on a cruise were unable to land their baggage, owing to a strike among the harbor workers.

SUFFRAGISTS PUT FLOWERS IN WALSH'S COAT

Five suffragist leaders called upon Governor Walsh at the State House today, congratulated him and the Democratic party upon the passage of the suffrage amendment, and were photographed upon the State House steps.

Announcement of the big suffrage rally to be held at Tremont Temple tonight featured the trappings worn by the heralds, Mrs. Clairborne Catlin and Miss Linda Marston, the latter a New Hampshire girl. Both attracted attention as the party made its way through the streets.

Mrs. Desha Breckenridge, Mrs. Mary Ware Dennet, Mrs. Stanley McCormick, Mrs. Susan W. Fitzgerald and Mrs. Medill McCormick comprised the delegation. They are officers of the National American Woman Suffrage Association. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, the president, is recovering from a broken ankle and could not go with the others. Miss McCall and Mrs. Clairborne Catlin, on horseback, bore sandwich-boards advertising the rally up the hill while the suffragists were with the Governor.

"We appreciate what the Democrats and you yourself, Governor Walsh, have done for us," said Mrs. FitzGerald, as the party left the Governor's office for the State House steps. There Mrs. Stanley McCormick thrust a flower in the Governor's buttonhole. While the camera man was getting ready, Representative John L. Donovan, "the Mayor of Chinatown," paraded and Governor Walsh called:

"Come on, John, get in the picture." Then he introduced the representative, saying: "He worked harder than any other man on the floor for the suffrage amendment."

LIVER OUT OF ORDER?

Rheumasalts Is Fine for the Liver and Kidneys

The liver is the largest gland in the body and one of the most delicate and important.

Lame back, shooting pains, tired feeling, dizziness, and nervousness simply mean that your liver and kidneys are clogged with impurities and that you are breathing, eating and inhaling their work of aiding the digestive functions and purifying the blood. Flush your liver and kidneys and set to working right again by taking Rheumasalts in a glass of water for a few mornings.

Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness and bladder disorders come from torpid liver and sluggish kidneys. So keep your liver and kidneys active and working right by taking Rheumasalts, the wonderfully efficient effervescent lithia drink that helps the blackened liver and kidneys and cleans out the stomach and eliminates the acids and poisons and leaves the intestinal canal clean and sweet.

Rheumasalts is a scientifically blended and chemically pure carbonated lithia drink. It is delightful to the taste, it is a uric acid solvent as well as a saline laxative. Acts quickly without griping or nausea.

The next time your liver and kidneys bother you, or your back aches, get a bottle of Rheumasalts. It costs in 25c, 50c, and $1.00 bottles. Your druggist hasn't the genuine Rheumasalts, send the price to the Rheumahath Company, Dept. 112, Minneapolis, Minn., for a bottle. Sold by all Riker-Jaynes and other leading drug stores.

MRS. WHEELER HUNTS ALIMONY FUND HERE

Mrs. Claudia Carlstadt Wheeler, who has sued her father-in-law, Albert G. Wheeler, builder of the Chicago subways, for $1,000,000 for alienation of her husband's affections, is in Boston today on the trial of securities held in her husband's name. She seeks to attach these securities to secure her plea for an increase to $10,000 alimony.

"Bertie" Wheeler is associated with his father in gigantic engineering feats all over the world. Mrs. Wheeler's pursuit of him and his securities dates from last September. Then she hurried across from England to adjust her alimony tangle. She has been busy ever since. Personally and with the aid of lawyers she has covered much of the United States in her search.

It was while dining in a Boston hotel that she finally met "Bertie"—and then by accident. Wheeler saw her, unceremoniously concluded his meal and vanished.

SECURITIES ATTACHED.

Mrs. Wheeler has engaged Sherman L. Whipple to look after her interests here, and the attorney has attached securities found in Wheeler's name in Boston banks and trust companies.

"You see," said Mrs. Wheeler, "my husband wants to cut down my allowance. When I separated from him in New York two years ago, after sixteen years of married life, I was granted alimony of $10,000 a year. For a year I was ill and then I went to England to live. While there my alimony suddenly stopped, and I had to drop everything and hasten to New York.

"My husband had my allowance cut to $6,000, and now he wants to reduce it to $4,000, and his real wish seems to be not to pay me a penny. He claims he is indebted to his father. The Appellate Court in New York told me if I could find that my husband had securities standing in his name in excess of what he told the court about, I could have the original alimony restored. That is why I have been hunting in different cities, and during my brief stay in Boston, I found that he had securities here.

"My attorneys and influential friends are trying to arrange for an amicable settlement. I am willing to do the fair thing, but I cannot live on air, and I certainly do not feel like bothering my devoted parents after having been married sixteen years. It would not be right.

"FIGHT AGAINST BILLIONS."

"Nobody knows the influences I have had to fight. My husband has not left any stone unturned. I have had the most discouraging obstacles to overcome. When the wealth of my father-in-law and my husband and the capitalists associated with them in the tunnel venture is taken into consideration it can be seen that I have had to fight against billions and alone—just a woman.

"But I shall win. I am bound to because right is might and I have right on my side. That is what makes me so courageous and hopeful."

Mrs. Wheeler has her plans all made for the future after she wins her alimony and her suit against father-in-law Wheeler. She wants:

First—An absolute divorce.

Second—A new husband.

Third—Babies, thirteen or fourteen of them.

Fourth—To dispense with her chaperone.

And Mrs. Wheeler, although she would not admit that she has already chosen the husband, described her ideal in glowing terms.

MRS. CYNTHIA WHEELER, who has attached her husband's Boston securities in a fight to have her alimony restored.

RICHEST DOG CONTENT WITH PLAIN BISCUIT

Eleven-year-old Pete Crafts, a gritty little Boston terrier, formerly owned by John Chancellor Crafts of No. 27 Lanark road, Brighton, the wealthiest dog in the world, may have troubles in living up to his income of $1,200 a year, left in Mr. Crafts' will for his taste is as democratic as that of a two-dollars-a-day laborer with ten children to support.

Given an income which would provide him with ramming-bird soup and squabs three times a day the year round, Pete persists in gnawing bones and eating dog-biscuits, with an occasional piece of cake or some sweet sandwiched in for a relish.

Under a ruling handed down by Judge George of the Probate Court in admitting the will of Pete's late master, this king of all dogs is given $750 outright in addition to the $1,200 annuity. Mary G. Preston, former housekeeper for Crafts, will have the spending of this money for Pete. In the event of her death while he is still able to wag his stumpy tail, the annuity will go to Emma Smith and Anna Crafts, to provide for the dog's needs.

"Mr. Crafts' desire to care for Pete is perfectly understandable, when one knows the full facts of the case," said Miss Preston today.

"Bow-wow," chimed in Pete from inside the door, as if knowing full well what was being said and wishing to corroborate the statement.

"Pete, you know," Miss Preston continued, "originally belonged to Mr. Crafts' brother. At the death of his brother, Mr. Crafts took care of the dog. That's why he wished to make sure Pete would be cared for, no doubt.

"I have taken care of Pete since he was five months old, and suppose that is why Mr. Crafts named me in his will as the one to carry out his wishes.

"Pete's birthday parties were arranged by me, so Pete could see his many child friends in a group, as he loves to play with children. I had Pete's picture printed on some postal cards, with a few words underneath to the effect that he wished the children to attend his birthday party each year."

"Bow-wow—wow-wow—bow-wow!" came a summons from inside the house at this instant, and Miss Preston smilingly excused herself to answer the summons.

Pete evidently had tired of being left alone, even for the few minutes it took to give this interview. The wealthiest dog in the world, in his own right, he didn't purpose being neglected.

Dreyfuss to Show Contracts in Court

PITTSBURGH, April 1.—Another chapter in the now famous Dreyfuss-Comiskey baseball injunction suit at Hot Springs, Ark., was written when President Barney Dreyfuss of the Pirates returned to Pittsburgh from the Arkansas training camp, removed the contracts of his thirty-three ball players from his strong box and prepared to start back to the vapor valley to offer said contracts in evidence before Judge Henderson in chancery court today.

Dreyfuss says that as a counter move he and other magnates in organized baseball are planning to attack the Federal League contracts in court.

"They have contended that our contracts lack mutuality," he said. "Well, we are going to show that there is even less mutuality in theirs. They have started something that they will regret before many weeks have passed."

WIFE'S CHARGES IN SUIT DENIED BY MISS WEIR

In the $20,000 suit of Mrs. Marie L. Bassi against Harriet Weir of Trowbridge street, Newton Centre, and her father, Robert Weir, for $20,000 for alleged alienation of the affections of her husband, Vincent L. Bassi, the defendant, Miss Weir, has filed in the Superior Court answers to interrogatories propounded by plaintiff.

Miss Weir says she is twenty-five, lives with her father, and is a bookkeeper employed by him. She says she knows one Vincent L. Bassi, but professes ignorance as to his being the husband of plaintiff. She met him when dining in Boston.

She says she saw him several times between February 15, 1912, and January 1, 1914, and went with him a few times to shows. She said he came to her house about a pet dog.

She said she never occupied rooms or an apartment in Boston with Bassi, never asked plaintiff to let her husband get a divorce from her in order that she might marry him and never had a conversation in regard to that subject with plaintiff.

NINE STARRAT ORPHANS NOW PARCELLED OUT

By CONSTANCE WILLIAMS.

Today I journeyed out to the little house at No. 264 Springvale avenue, Everett, where Charles F. Starrat killed his wife while in an intoxicated state.

The story-and-a-half six-room cottage which was once called home, looked barren and forlorn—no childish face at the window, no cheerful smoke curling from the friendly chimney, no mother's song to break the monotony of daily duty, no baby prattle in the kitchen—nothing but an awful quiet brooding over the house tonight.

I approached the door and knocked. It was opened by a brother—James Sparrat.

There was no carpet on the narrow hall. Threadbare rugs partially covered the front hall floor. Through the half-open door into the dining-room beyond I had seen the empty high chair which had held the little one of the Starrat children in turn. The wooden chairs, the old-style sewing machine, over which those nimble fingers would never toil again to fashion the little garments for her own, were there, the cheap chrome fruit-piece on the glaring wallpaper, the bare table around which once a family of seven had been partaken of in the happy days now dead—all gripped my heart.

AGED MOTHER IN COLLAPSE.

As in a dream I could see again the hour of evening in the little home. The children running to kiss their "daddy" his return; the baby crowing from his high chair at the window; the patient, plodding wife and mother busying herself about the evening supper things—again these trooped before my vision in fancy. But it was over now, and I could see that family be the same. Other homes might be bright; other hearts might be light; but for the Starrat family—here was a home that was dead.

A few blocks away from Mrs. Mary Starrat, the eighty-four-year-old mother of Charles F. Starrat. In a state bordering on collapse, the aged woman is in care of her daughter at No. 38 Calahoun avenue. It was decided that they did not dare to tell the poor woman the whole truth for fear it would unhinge her reason.

Charles F. Starrat was once as gentle and pure of heart as any mother's son. Drink was his undoing. When, twenty years ago, he led pretty Miss Elizabeth Case to the altar, no one dreamed that their happiness would end so disastrously.

CHILDREN "PARCELLED OUT."

Now, the bairns are scattered to the four winds of Society. The Starrat children, big and little, to use their Uncle Jim's expression are "parcelled out among relatives." Three of the boys, Howard, fifteen; Fred, six, and George, five, are staying with their Uncle James in Lynn. Marion, twelve; Evelyn, ten, and Helen, eight, are with their grandmother at 38 Calahoun avenue, near the former home. And the babies, Florence, aged two, and Little John, one year old, are taken care of by Starrat's sister, Mrs. Edna Hitchcock, at No. 5 Forsyth street, Chelsea. The oldest girl, Ethel, a veritable "little mother" since a mere child, is with the babies.

"I have always taken care of the babies," said Ethel, "and mother wouldn't like it up in Heaven if they didn't go with me. You see, I understand them better than any one else, and no one can do for them as I can."

The maternal spirit is strong in these "little mothers." And perhaps it is best in crises like this.

Today the pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters of all the schoolmates of the Starrat children were freely given when a box was placed for that purpose in each of the rooms of the Webster school in the Woodlawn district of Everett, where the elder Starrat children attended. The kind-hearted school teachers were behind this means of demonstrating sympathy to the orphaned family. I learned that a very substantial sum was realized.

Shaw Art Prize for Medway Woman

PICKANNINNIES TO PLAY AND SING FOR LITTLE SHUT-INS

Miss Maude Parker, Boston Girl who is leading lady of "In Old Kentucky" now playing at the Boston Theatre and whose "pickaninny band" is to give performances at several of the children's hospitals and asylums of the city.

The "pickaninnies band" playing at the Boston Theatre with the "In Old Kentucky" company, has been persuaded by the Boston AMERICAN to give children in the charitable homes about the city a real treat and one that they will remember.

The band—twenty of the pickaninnies, with buck and wing dancing, baton jugglers, and singers — will visit five of the institutions, one today and four tomorrow. Today they will go to the New England Home for Little Wanderers at No. 202 West Newton street; and tomorrow they will visit in order, the Children's Hospital on Huntington avenue, the Industrial School for Crippled and Deformed Children at No. 241 St. Botolph street, the St. Vincent Orphan Asylum on Camden street, and the Home for Jewish Children on Canterbury and Austin streets, Dorchester.

The band is one of the winning features of "In Old Kentucky"—in which Maude Parker, a Boston girl, is the leading lady. A. W. Dingwall, owner of the company, has agreed to let his pickaninnies go the rounds, and automobile firms have volunteered their cars to transport the performers.

The AMERICAN set about arranging the treat for the children as soon as the pickaninnies arrived in town. The automobiles to be used for the tour include two White cars loaned by J. S. Hathaway of the White Company; one Chevrolet car from the Chevrolet Motor Company, loaned by Manager W. C. Sills; a Stutz car, loaned by Manager M. F. Chase of the Stutz Motor Car Company; and an Oakland, loaned by Manager W. B. Fewell of the Oakland Motor Car Company.

England's Total Income $991,214,485

LONDON, April 1.—The treasury statement for the fiscal year seems to justify the much criticized optimism of David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, which led him a year ago to decide to meet the heavy increase in expenditures by the natural growth of revenue from the existing taxes, instead of imposing new taxes. The total revenue for the year was $991,214,485, an increase of $47,804,490 over that of the previous year. The total expenditure was $937,469,845, an increase of $44,-355,000.

EDNA TUFTS' LETTER TELLS PLAN TO DIE

TAUNTON, April 1.—Edna Tufts of No. 57 Haskell street, Haverhill, detained here when her companion, Edwin G. Holmes of Malden, was arrested for the Malden police on a larceny charge, was expected to be sent home to her mother today. The girl, who is twenty-one years old and very attractive, first told the police she came from Lawrence, but when that was proved untrue, said she lived in Haverhill.

She said: "I intended to kill myself in Boston, but Mr. Holmes persuaded me not to. I tried to leave him and could not.

In her handbag was found a letter addressed to the Boston AMERICAN which read:

"Dear Boston AMERICAN: Please put this in your paper so Mamma in Haverhill will not worry about her little girl.

"I ran away from home to try and forget and start life over again; but I have found out that it is too hard to fight alone without my mother's and Billy's aid to help me; and I am so lonesome!

"I have done wrong, but God in heaven knows I don't want always to be bad.

"If I only could forget it and start life over! But it seems as if I could never forget it and I am always thinking of it. I know everyone hates me and I don't care what becomes of me. I cannot stand it any longer. The thought of it just sets me crazy. And God knows how I have prayed for him to take me out of this bad world!

"So by the time you get this I will be in the Charles River, which is the happiest place for a poor, heart-broken little girl like me. For I cannot face it. I have done wrong, and lost all I ever loved.

"Nothing to live for, no one to love me or to hear me. I am so lonesome, heart-broken and sick of it all! God forgive a little girl like me, for I just cannot stand it any longer. Goodby to all that ever loved me—and forgive me! Something calls me to do it.

"A heart-broken little Haverhill girl.

"EDNA T."

Why Do French Women Always Look Young?

In France mothers and daughters look like sisters. How are the women there able to retain their youthful looks until long past middle age? Is it because they are much given to the use of mercolized wax? This wax possesses absorbable absorbent property which quickly removes the fine particles of cuticle which are constantly dying and which are the immediate cause of an old-looking complexion. Thus the livelier, healthier, younger skin beneath is given a chance to breathe and show itself. Try this treatment yourself. Most likely it will not require two weeks to make your complexion as clear, soft and beautiful as a young girl's. Just one ounce of mercolized wax (all American druggists have it) usually does the work. The wax is put on nights like cold cream and washed off mornings.

Another valuable secret with which the French are familiar is how to quickly remove wrinkles. One ounce of powdered saxolite dissolved in a half pint witch hazel makes a marvelous astringent lotion. Bathe the face; it should be bathed in this daily until even the deepest lines are affected.—ADVERTISEMENT.

WILLIAMS GIRL AND ACTOR FACE NEW YORK COURT

Eighteen-year-old Alice M. Williams, who disappeared from her home in Chelsea and was arrested in New York following a pathetic "Little Lost Sister" plea issued by her mother, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Shields there today with Genereso Pisano, an actor, with whom she is said to have left Boston. They were discharged and the girl started on her way to Boston.

Pisano is married. He is suspected of violating the Mann white slave act. He told Magistrate Appleton, when arraigned in the New York municipal court, he loved the girl and intended to marry her as soon as he was granted a divorce.

Pisano and the girl were taken into custody at the request of the Boston police and will probably be turned over to the authorities in this city tomorrow or Friday. Their whereabouts were discovered following the receipt of two letters, one by Mrs. F. G. Williams, mother of the girl, and the other by a girl chum in Chelsea.

The Chelsea police have a warrant for the Williams girl, charging her with being a stubborn child. She lived with her father and mother at No. 59 Congress avenue, Chelsea, and was employed in a Huntington avenue theatre up to last Thursday evening, when she disappeared. In her letter to her girl friend, Miss Williams said she intended to go on the stage in a few weeks as "Mrs. Dorsa Pisano."

PLAYING FOR BLIND TOUCHES JANE COWL

"That was the most wonderful audience I ever played to," said Miss Jane Cowl, leading lady, at the close of the special performance of "Within the Law," given at the Majestic Theatre for the benefit of 3,200 blind men, women and children.

"They were amazingly heavenly," she said. "You know every actor soons learns the psychology of an audience and can tell when they first go on the stage how they are going to be received. But we didn't have to study these people. They get points nobody else gets, not even the typical Boston audience, and I never enjoyed my work so much."

The unique performance was attended by Governor Walsh, Mayor Curley and his family, and Secretary of State Donahue. The Governor and Mayor delivered short addresses. Special programs, printed with raised letters, were distributed and the sightless were further enlightened by a synopsis of each act read from the stage by Charles W. Towne.

Otherwise there was but little to distinguish the piece from the ordinary everyday performance and it was a tremendous success. The little tots and the aged men and women, deprived of the use of their eyes, endeared themselves to the cast with their appreciative applause.

The hosts of the day, the Wilbur-Shubert Company, proprietors of the playhouse; Selwyn & Company, producers, and the members of the cast enjoyed the performance as much as their guests.

There were ten blind women in the audience between the ages of seventy-two and eighty-four who had never before been inside a theatre. To them it was a wonderful experience. Some of the younger folk were escorted behind the scenes between the acts and told how the scenery is moved.

As tokens of their appreciation the blind people brought gifts for the members of the company.

WELLESLEY PLAYERS MAY TOUR COUNTRY

The Wellesley Juniors, who give "Beau Brummel" at the Cort Theatre tomorrow and Friday afternoon, are so enthusiastic at the results of the advance sale of tickets that they are considering a trip across the country, with two performances in each city, and with the motto: "$100,000 for the Fire Fun" as a goal. The Lambs' Club Gambol would be outdone.

The first day's work selling tickets and canvassing for programs netted about $2,500. It was predicted that every seat in the house for both performances would be sold before tonight. John Cort, who has given the use of the theatre free, is ready to allow the girls to use his playhouse in New York for a similar purpose; and there is no doubt if it were decided to arrange a tour that a first-class theatre in every city visited would be offered for the use of the girls.

"Beau Brummel" is one of the most successful Junior plays given at Wellesley in years, and Tracy L'Engle, who plays Beau Brummel, has made a reputation for herself in the part that has penetrated even to New York dramatic circles.

The work of preparing for the production has been stupendous. The girls were summoned by telegraph to go over their almost forgotten lines under the direction of Miss Edith Margaret Small of the elocution department at Wellesley.

Should the success of the performance in Boston justify it, a trip may be arranged to embrace New York, Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia, Albany, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, and perhaps even Denver and San Francisco. Many Wellesley girls come from Kansas and Missouri, and they are scattered all over the West, so that the players would find friends everywhere.

Theatrical experts believe $100,000 could be raised in the course of a few weeks by such a trip.

MISS VINING'S BEAUTY CROWN GOES TO TUKEY

Miss Floretta Vining, equally famous as a D. A. R. leader and South Shore newspaper publisher, says that Charles P. ("Charlie") Tukey of the Boston Opera House is not only the handsomest man in Boston, but is also an ideal man. Fact. She said so today.

Draw close, all you other men of Boston, and hear what fulsome praise Miss Vining bestows upon Mr. Tukey:

"He's tall, he's attractive, he's well-poised, well-groomed, walks well and is as immaculate as Beau Brummel.

"His gray hairs are no drawback—they're rather an attraction.

"If a woman looks at him once, she'll look at him again. And the more you look at him the more you want to look at him.

"His face is expressive—of kindness, of geniality. He would win anybody.

"The younger women must be drawn to him because he is an ideal man in every respect. He is a gentleman of the old school. He knows how to speak to a lady.

"In every way, Mr. Tukey is a splendid example of the old maxim: "Handsome is as handsome does."

CURLEY HURLS SHAKESPEARE AT FITZ AGAIN

Developments to date in the embroglio between Mayor Curley and former Mayor Fitzgerald are as follows:

The ex-Mayor declares his "King John" quotation has "got the Mayor's goat."

Mr. Fitzgerald renews his challenge to the Mayor for open debate at the City Club on April 16.

Mayor Curley makes a double retort. He quotes again from Shakespeare, this time citing that popular excerpt from "Othello," which begins: "Who steals my purse steals trash," and concluding with the reproach to him who "Robes from me my good name."

The Mayor also charges the ex-Mayor railroaded through the transaction whereby the city bought a new fire engine house in Charlestown, saying the ex-Mayor's family was enriched thereby.

James T. Fitzgerald, brother of the ex-Mayor and the former owner of the engine house site, closes the chapter with a vigorous denial of any undue profit in the sale of the property to the city. He says:

"In 1906, I paid $5,500 for the property Mr. Curley refers to. Three months afterward I improved it with new buildings, at an expense of $6,500, bringing the total cost up to $12,000. I can produce the receipts for the money paid for the new buildings. It was paid to Charles Logue. The assessment previous to the alterations was very low. The extra assessment of $2,000, on an expenditure of $6,500, was put on after the new buildings were erected. The assessment was then $9,500. Under the law I was entitled to 25 per cent over the assessed valuation. The street commissioners could have allowed me $1,500 more than I was paid."

HORSE KILLED M'CARRICK BOY, SAYS FARMER

PHILADELPHIA, April 1.—Warren McCarrick, the seven-year-old boy who has been missing since March 12, was kicked to death by a horse attached to a farm wagon which was standing near the boy's home, according to a letter received by Robert Cameron, captain of detectives. The writer, who has not revealed his identity or the location of his farm, declares the boy's hoop rolled under his horse, and that when the child tried to get it he was kicked in the head.

The farmer placed him in the wagon and started to drive to a hospital, according to the letter, but finding that the boy was dead he became panic-stricken and took the body to his farm. The outskirts of this city and buried it.

WON'T BE PROSECUTED.

Captain Cameron says the farmer will not be prosecuted if the story is substantiated.

The missive, written in German and mailed in this city, is signed "A Troubled Farmer," follows:

Dear Sir—You will excuse me if I bother you. Fourteen days ago I had an accident and hard luck. I don't know what to do. I have a wife and six children, and, worse luck, my wife is sick. I intended to surrender for a long while, but no one would believe me, and if I should be put in prison, what would become of my wife and children? I am a farmer, only a few years in this country, and cannot speak English. I wrote to Mr. Carrick three days ago in German. I am afraid some one would kill me and burn my house down. I know where the boy is. I stopped with my wagon at Nineteenth and Bainbridge streets fourteen days ago. When I came out and saw a small boy playing around the feet of my horse.

"WAS BEATING HORSE."

The boy had a hoop under my horse's foot, and the boy was beating the horse on his stomach. The horse raised his hoof and knocked the boy down and cut his head. I took the boy in the wagon to take him to a hospital, but the boy's head was covered with blood, and I was afraid.

I put my hand on his heart, and there was no sign of life. The cut on the boy's head was terrible, and his brains were coming out. I did not know who the boy was. My wife does not know anything. I burned the rags which I covered the boy's body with, and washed the wagon. I will turn over the body to Mr. McCarrick if I am not punished. The boy was killed instantly.

Let me know through the newspapers how I shall do it. I thought of burning the body, but did not want to be a murderer.

FARMER IN BAD LUCK.

Captain of Detectives Cameron has turned practically his whole force loose in an effort to trace the letter.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys if bladder bothers you.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

WALSH FAVORS YEAR TERM FOR MILITIA HEAD

"There should be a return to the system which gave the undivided and unhampered responsibility and authority to the administration of the militia to the Governor of the Commonwealth," declared Governor Walsh, today in discussing the decision on his appeal to the Supreme Court, which ruled that the Legislature had the constitutional right to fix the Adjutant-General's tenure of office.

For several months Governor Walsh has been trying to displace Adjutant-General Pearson and the decision handed down means that he has lost his fight.

"As the Supreme Court has pointed out," Governor Walsh continued, "the power to remove the adjutant-general, after a finding of court-martial, remains, but the necessity of the exercise of this extraordinary power at any time should be obviated by legislation which will restore the one-year tenure. No efficient, faithful servant need fear a short term tenure; the limited terms of public service are fixed to provide early opportunity to rid the public service of indifferent as well as incompetent servants."

Arrests are expected today as a result of the seizure of a trunk by the customs inspectors at the Boston & Albany pier, following the docking of the Italian liner Palermo from Naples and Genoa. The trunk, which is believed to contain dutiable goods, is held pending an examination of its contents.

The trunk is said to belong to a woman, and the authorities believe they have unearthed a clever smuggling plot. The guard noted the number chalked on the trunk, but failed to find the initials of the customs inspector that, under the rules, accompany the number as evidence that the contents have been examined and passed. Investigation revealed that the inspector corresponding with the number was not on duty, and accordingly the trunk was confiscated.

These tablets are wonder-workers as the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter that, if retained, poisons the system and produces biliousness, a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, languid feeling, all signs of acute, lurking trouble. Take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

CONNOLLY SEES NEED OF STRONG HAND IN MEXICO

"Should President Wilson intervene" asked James R. Connolly, Progressive candidate for Congress in the Twelfth District, speaking at Washington Hall.

"It is a strong measure to take—to say that a people shall not be allowed to govern themselves, even to govern themselves to their own undoing. It is the almost inalienable right of a nation, as well as the individual, to order the government of his life as he sees fit, so long as he does not interfere with the safety or comfort of neighbors. But if the revolutionists are killing American men, women and children in Mexico, then I think the government should at least demand reparation, and, if necessary, intervene."

James A. Gallivan, the Democratic candidate, pleased himself always to live in South Boston. He was enthusiastically greeted at numerous rallies.

Frank L. Brier, the Republican candidate, had a big automobile parade through many sections of the district.

Whiffles Picks a Partner.

CHAPTER I.

"Money!" cried Whiffles, bursting into my rooms like a peripatetic volcano. "Money, money, money!"

"Good Lord," I said. "How much? I thought you were in Paris. I left Paris to be rid of you. I planned to economize by swearing off your fascinating acquaintance. And here you are in New York—broke! I am GLAD to see you!"

"Broke? Who said I was broke?" demanded Whiffles with that look of idiocy that he assumes at will.

"You came in here yelling for money at the top of your voice, didn't you?"

Whiffles chuckled. "I was soliloquizing, my dear fellow, not begging," he said. "I was denouncing money in scorn and hate."

"Then you must be rich again." I suggested. "Only the rich can afford to belittle riches."

"I am," said Whiffles. "To be rich I have sold my life, my liberty and my right to pursue happiness. I am—"

"Whiffles! You don't mean it?"

"It is perfectly true—I am to be married."

"My dear fellow, I congratulate you," I cried in all heartiness. "It will be the greatest thing in the world for you. It will brace you up and hold you down, so to speak. It is—"

"Rubbish, dear George," groaned Whiffles. "Marriage was invented for nice, stupid people, like you. You take to it naturally. Sometimes I half believe you rather enjoy it. But the higher nature, the artistic temperament, is crushed by marriage. One's art never gets along with one's wife."

"And what is your art?" may I ask?"

"I am not so sure that it is not courtship," said Whiffles.

CHAPTER II.

"You see, Uncle Paul, my pleasant guardian, who never did anything righteous in his life and therefore devotes much time to making me righteous, began to be funny because I didn't marry," continued the irrepressible one. "I had promised to marry several charming young persons, but the engagements had fallen through."

"Through what?"

"Through my own shortcomings," said Whiffles. "I did not want to be married—that is until I got this note from Uncle Paul a week after you left Paris."

He drew a paper from his pocket and read ruefully:

"My Dear Whiffles—You have lost six good chances to get married, and all because of your crazy cussedness. If you do not get a wife within a month I will cut off your allowance and forget you in my will. Yours,

"UNCLE PAUL."

"Charming old gentleman—what?" commented Whiffles. "Nice position to put me in—me, his beloved nephew! I was on the point of disowning the old reprobate then and there and coming to live with you, only I knew you would bore me to death in a week.

"But I got my New York newspapers with the same mail that brought me uncle's little love note. And within ten minutes after I read the note I read this:

MARRIAGES.

Young men who are desirous of embarking on the sea of matrimony should consult us. We can furnish suitable partners and guarantee a match within thirty days.

HAPPYWED MATRIMONIAL AGENCY,
New York.

"In the next column there was another 'ad' addressed to young women, so I felt the institution must be upright and complete. I decided to keep my temper, my uncle and my allowance and come to New York.

CHAPTER III.

"Of course I didn't come to see you, because you would have spoofed my motives as mercenary. You would have crushed my good resolutions with hard moral truths. I went straight to the Happywed Matrimonial Agency, No. 101 Fidelity lane, and registered as a candidate. They arranged to show some samples the next day."

"Some what?"

"Some of the charming gentlewomen who were seeking husbands as I was seeking a wife.

"I was very much embarrassed that next day. I had never before attempted to pick a wife out of a procession, so to speak. I became afflicted with such a case of bashfulness—"

"Whiffles, you ask me to believe that?"

"As I live—a case of old-fashioned, mushy-blushy bashfulness. If it hadn't been for Martha I should have been forced to flee in confusion."

"For—whom?"

"Martha—ah, yes—I forgot to tell you the name of the most precious—and fortunate—woman in the world. Miss Martha Richman it is, the daughter of Peter, one of those men who dabble in wealth, have nice homes, bad manners and beautiful daughters."

"Well?"

"Well, Martha had read the girls' end of that advertisement, and had thought—so she told me—that it would be the cutest joke in the world to have a husband—just to go and get one and fetch it home to show to papa.

"She came over to me, where I was huddling out of range of the charms of the many lively creatures, and she said: 'You're bashful, aren't you? So am I.'

"I looked down into a pair of really bewitching eyes, and I began to forgive Uncle Paul.

"By the terms of the agreement I had the privilege of calling every afternoon at her home for a week. If, at the end of that time, either found the other unsuitable, he or she could go back to the agency and start over again.

CHAPTER IV.

"Father, dear," said Martha, introducing me for the first time at the family establishment on Riverside Drive, 'this is Mr. Whiffles, whom I spoke to you about.'

"Mr. Richman, a tall, vigorous old gentleman, with a scowl of greeting that corrugated his brow like a washboard, looked through my waistcoat to the other side of me and said in a voice soft as the rasping of a file on a rusty nail:

"'So YOU are the person who met my daughter in a matrimonial agency?'

"'Oh, father, you said you would be glad to meet Mr. Whiffles,' cried Martha.

"'I am glad,' says papa. 'I am glad of the opportunity to kick him through the front door and into the next block. Do you DARE,' he yells, turning that X-ray eye through me again, 'Do you DARE call at my house under these appalling circumstances? Do you not realize that this flighty child was engaged in an innocent prank when she went to that place? To her it was all a joke. To me it was not a joke until I saw the thing six selected.'

"'Oh, father, father, father,' wailed Martha.

"She ran to my side, but he thrust us apart—thrust me, I believe, rather farther apart than was necessary. At any rate I picked myself up at the bottom of the outer doorsteps.

"I hastened straight to the matrimonial agency and denounced the proprietor. I was no longer bashful. I was outrageously cheerful.

"'But my dear Mr. Whiffles,' you neglected to tell the young lady's father of your large income and the inheritance that will come after your uncle's death,' said the proprietor. 'Do you not know that old Richman lost all his money in copper yesterday?'

"'I only know that all the copper in Popper today,' I said. 'The proprietor went into his private room. I could hear he was telephoning to some one.

CHAPTER V.

"What was my astonishment on returning to my hotel to find that I was no longer angry. It is my rule to be angry for at least two days after being kicked out of any house. But now my feelings were those of grief, of bereavement merely."

"You received a message that your uncle had died?"

"No, George, my bereavement was the bereavement of love. I was never so surprised in my life.

"Nor was I ever so happy in my life as when I received a message from Martha that evening, asking me to hasten to her home. I put on a suit of chain armor and went. She met me at the door. Her father met me at the door. He bowed his head in apology. He spoke flowing words of regret.

"'So YOU are the person who DARES to be the father of this beautiful child!' I exclaimed, as I took Martha in my arms. 'Will you marry me, Martha?' I inquired in my best style.

"'Yes,' she cooed.

"'Then I am happy; then I am rich. You have given me $10,000 a year as well as the treasure of your heart. You need no father—at least, no father who has lost his last copper in copper. You may tell him he is no longer needed, my dear.'

"Papa was pacing up and down, shaking his fist behind my back, trying to make forgiveness when I turned my face toward him. He was begging very nicely for pity, protection and pardon, when Martha called me off. We are to be married Monday—just inside the thirty-day limit. If the advertising will help sell your books you may be best man.'

SURE WAY TO GET RID OF DANDRUFF

End Itching Scalp and Stop Falling Hair—At Once.

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely; find that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night, when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you want to keep your hair looking rich, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for nothing destroys the hair so quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everybody notices it. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

RAILROAD HEAD TELLS AMERICAN THE EXTENT OF RETRENCHMENT

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

American railroads have reduced their working forces by fully 250,000 men and have cut working hours.

And this staggering total will be seriously swelled unless conditions promptly improve.

These statements are based on signed communications the New York American has received from the presidents of our leading railroad systems.

Normally, our railways employ approximately 1,700,000 men. A 15 per cent. reduction—which is under rather than over the mark—means 255,000 men.

One point emphasized by all railroad heads is that retrenchment is not a matter of this week or last, but has been in force for several months.

Also, the reduction in forces, it is pointed out, has not been equal to the falling off in net earnings.

Withdrawal of passenger trains is now engaging the attention of officers. Economy in this direction is likely to be carried a good deal further.

Among the companies already heard from, with the reduction in forces, as compared with a year ago, are the following:

| | |
|---|---|
| Pennsylvania Railroad | 25,000 |
| New York Central | 25,000 |
| Norfolk & Western | 8,000 |
| Northern Pacific | 3,600 |
| New Haven | 4,500 |
| Lehigh Valley | 3,000 |
| Baltimore & Ohio (unofficial) | 10,000 |
| Missouri Pacific (unofficial) | 12,000 |

The following telegrams have been received:

NEW HAVEN DROPS 4,500 AND MUCH WORK STOPPED.

NEW YORK, April 1.—The reduction in forces on the New Haven road on account of the decrease in earnings and poor financial conditions is equivalent to about 4,500 men, compared with the period of November.

These reductions have been mainly in stations, yards and shop forces.

A reduction of 1,900 train miles a day in passenger train service was made effective February 15.

All improvement and construction work has been stopped or postponed, except work necessary for safety or work so far along that it could not be stopped. HOWARD ELLIOTT.

NORFOLK & WESTERN LAYS OFF 8,000 AND MORE MAY HAVE TO BE LET GO.

PHILADELPHIA, April 1.—Your telegram has been forwarded to me here.

My policy is at all times to hold expenses to meet business conditions, and there have been consistent and continuous retrenchments on the Norfolk & Western Railway since July 1, 1913.

All work possible has been curtailed, and a considerable amount of additions and betterments will be suspended and will be held in suspense until business conditions are very decidedly improved.

Passenger train services will be maintained to meet requirements.

The property will not be permitted to depreciate either as to track or equipment.

Our gross earnings have increased from July 1, 1913, to March 1, 1914, $444,000 as compared with the same period a year ago, while net earnings for the same period have decreased $1,211,000.

From November 1, 1913, to date there have been suspended and relieved from service a total of 8,000 men, in round numbers, and still further reductions will be necessary unless business revives.

L. E. JOHNSON.

ATCHISON REDUCING, BUT NOT SO MUCH AS EARNINGS.

CHICAGO, April 1.—We have pursued usual policy of curtailing expenses as business decreased. However, we have not succeeded in reducing our expenses as much as our earnings have fallen off.

There has been special curtailment since January 1.

E. P. RIPLEY.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC FORCED TO RETRENCH BY LOSS IN EARNINGS.

NEW YORK, April 1.—Our company's heavy loss in net earnings in this fiscal year necessarily forced us to adopt a policy of retrenchment in all branches of the service.

Our future retrenchment policy differs in no respect from that outlined above, which we have always followed in the past.

WILLIS KRUTTSCHNITT.

NORTHERN PACIFIC HAS 3,683 FEWER THAN YEAR AGO

ST. PAUL, April 1.—To meet the situation, forced upon us by hard business this year than last, in February we were able to reduce train mileage 64,689 miles compared with February last year.

The number of employes in February, 1913, was 28,037; in February, 1914, 24,354, a decrease of 3,683.

In addition to the shops' force laid off we are operating about 12 per cent. short time.

We do not contemplate any material change until earnings improve.

J. M. HANNAFORD.

LEHIGH VALLEY LAYS OFF FULLY 3,000—ACCOUNTING DEPARTMENT OVERWORKED.

Lehigh Valley has laid off upward of 3,000 men, and the remaining 86 per cent. of its normal force of 33,800 are working only two-thirds time.

The following statement is official:

The Lehigh Valley Railroad has made every effort to keep its working force of every branch intact. With business conditions demanding the strictest economy and reductions, it has been sought to make the latter in the number of hours worked by the men rather than in removing workers from the employment of the company.

At the present time the company is employing about 86 per cent. of its normal force. This force, however, is only working 68 per cent. of normal time.

With regard to the shops, the economies there have been made almost entirely in working hours. The men are now working on a forty-five-hour-a-week basis, as against fifty-five hours in normal times. The present basis of working hours is somewhat improved over a month ago.

There is one department in the railroad where there has been no reduction in the force, and instead of a reduction in working hours there has been an increase of nearly 10 per cent. This is the accounting department. There the employes have had to work overtime fathering data and preparing information in answer to questions asked by the Interstate Commerce Commission and various State bodies.

With regard to the withdrawal of trains, nothing has been done in this connection as yet.

The management is considering making application in New York and Pennsylvania for the withdrawal of certain trains ordered by the State Public Service Commission which have proved unprofitable during the whole period of their operation. A few other minor trains also may be withdrawn.

ST. PAUL MADE CUTS EARLY IN WINTER.

CHICAGO, April 1.—The St. Paul Railway made such reductions in its force early last Winter as were necessary on account of the decrease in traffic.

No further reductions are in contemplation unless there should be further shrinkage. A. J. EARLING.

CHICAGO & NORTHWESTERN NOT CUTTING.

CHICAGO, April 1.—Chicago & Northwestern and Omaha Railway companies will not make any reduction in hours or forces at this time. We always have smaller forces and hours both in maintenance of way and shops April 1, and will pursue this policy, taking effect tomorrow.

Increase in train mileage is made when demand for travel justifies. We shall follow our usual plan in that respect.

W. A. GARDNER, President.

M., K. & T. RETRENCHING SINCE NOVEMBER.

Frank Trumbull, chairman of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, said yesterday that the bad crops and floods had caused the road to start retrenching last November.

BUSINESS GOOD WITH ILLINOIS CENTRAL.

CHICAGO, April 1.—Because of the large cotton crop sold at unusually high prices business conditions in no important part of the territory served by the Illinois Central lines have been exceptionally good. Earnings have, therefore, been so satisfactory we have not as yet found it necessary to adopt drastic methods of retrenchment.

C. H. MARKHAM.

CANADIAN PACIFIC REDUCING, BUT NOT DRASTICALLY.

MONTREAL, April 1.—With the shrinkage of traffic during the last few months there has naturally been a reduction of staff, but we have made no drastic curtailment nor have we such a policy in contemplation.

E. W. BEATTY.

MORE PENNSYLVANIA TRAINS TO BE TAKEN OFF.

PITTSBURGH, April 1.—Retrenchment on the Pennsylvania lines west is to be extended. Ten passenger trains are to be taken off the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad next Sunday, six of them suburban trains. Shop forces also are being reduced.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were higher this afternoon, opening gains having been firmly held in most instances during the morning. The present firmness is attributed to the market being oversold. The demand for stocks is believed to be mostly due to covering requirements. There has been no buying of consequence on the part of the public.

Missouri Pacific was the feature in New York, where by afternoon it was up 1¼ at 27¾. Previously it had sold as high as 27¼. Among gains were Canadian Pacific ½, Reading ¾, Lehigh Valley ¾, New Haven ¼, American Can ¾, Amalgamated ¾, American Smelting ¾, Baltimore & Ohio ¾ and Union Pacific ¼. Steel and Northern Pacific were unchanged. American Telephone was off ¾, having recovered part of the earlier loss.

In Boston both New Haven and Boston & Maine were unchanged, while United Fruit was up 1¼, Butte & Superior ¼, Calumet & Arizona ¾, North Butte ¼, Mohawk ¾ and Osceola 1½. American Telephone was off ¾ and Granby a shade.

EARLY TONE WAS FIRM.

Markets got away with a firm tone and prices at the start averaged a shade above yesterday's final level. The range was very narrow, however, and the buying which the advance brought out enough stock to make it easy to meet it with slightly recede during the first hour. Interest was largely centred upon Missouri Pacific, which was the leader for a good part of the gain. But it showed no decided recession when it quickly throughout the morning. There seemed to be a little more buying of the stock on the rise, but this does not mean that there was increased participation by traders on the part of the public. It continued to be a purely professional market. Members regretted that prices were irregular, but the majority of active issues showed small gains. Union Pacific, Reading, Lehigh Valley, Southern Pacific and Canadian Pacific were the leaders in the group. There was more activity in the local list than in the larger market. Boston Americans were higher as a class. Sentiment there is more cheerful, but complaint is made of indifference on the part of the public. Strength in coppers indicated a more successful the Ulster situation has become.

MISSOURI PACIFIC RUMOR.

So far there has been no confirmation of the report that Standard Oil men are going to acquire Gould interests in the Missouri Pacific, something which would mean a reorganization of the road's credit. The rumor is that Jacob H. Stockbridge has an option on the Gould stock, which amounts to around 250,000 shares. There has been nothing definite heard before. Nothing definite has ever come from Mr. H. Rogers who would not discuss the matter, and when George J. Gould was asked if there was any foundation for the report he would not discuss it at all. The rumor, together with hope of a decision by the Interstate Commerce Commission on the freight rate question earlier than has been the case, has been current in Wall street for several days. Speyer & Co., Missouri Pacific bankers, would not deny the Rockefeller story. Reticence of all concerned was of great advantage to certain speculators. One of the phases of the Missouri Pacific situation relates to notes amounting to $25,000,000 which are due on June. With Standard Oil assistance they would easily be cared for. There has been some question raised as to the ability of the interests now controlling the road to arrange for this financing with expedition and ease.

INTEREST CENTRES ON RAILS.

Stock market and commercial interest now largely centre upon railroads. There is nothing of more importance, it is claimed by many, to either the country's business or investments than the rate question. President Willard of the Baltimore & Ohio says there is a crisis and that roads cannot longer earn money upon new capital it is necessary to put into the transportation business. He also referred to the wholesale discharge of railway employes, saying:

"A crisis approaches when the net revenues of transportation are so reduced that the railroads to maintain fair returns upon their capital investments must curtail their forces. Those who hold the securities would certainly consider that a crisis.

"It would also be a condition of crisis for the workingmen if they were those of large positions, not because of there being no need for their services, but because of the inability of employers to pay. As far as I can see, all these conditions are at hand."

STOCKS TOO WATERY.

One of the claims by opponents of an increase in freight rates is that the business adversely which has befallen carriers is due chiefly to stock jobbery and stock watering. They assert that present rates and present traffic would yield roads revenues sufficient to pay high wages, to make extensions, provide for all needed equipment and allow for maintenance at the highest standard of efficiency on the basis of what it actually cost to build the railways of this country, but that Wall street has gone so much stock watering and given so many subsidiary lines at exorbitant prices and, in fact, laden railways with so many burdens of financial ingenuity that if they are in a bad way it is rather because of frauds upon the public and investors than because of economic conditions. Being a Judicial body, of course the Interstate Commerce Commission does not discuss the evidence and all the arguments presented by both sides.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

The Pennsylvania system's operating revenue in February, totalled $24,310,209, a decrease of $3,811,144, and operating income, $8,815,268, a decrease of $2,310,125 compared with February, 1912.

The London copper warrants market went firm this morning and by noon spot and futures were each up 15s.

THE WOMAN THOU GAVEST ME

Hall Caine's Greatest Story

THE NARRATIVE OF MARY O'NEILL

FIFTH PART

I BECOME A MOTHER

Copyright, 1912, by Hearst's Magazine. Copyright, 1913, by Hearst's Magazine. Copyright in Great Britain. Copyright, 1913, by J. B. Lippincott Company.

I think the next few minutes must have been the most evil of all my life. When I saw, or thought I saw, that, though one word would save me, one little word, Mildred intended to give me away to the men downstairs, I leapt to my feet and burst out on her with the bitterest reproaches.

"You religious women are always talking about your duty," I cried. "You never think about love. Love is kind and merciful; but no, duty, always duty! Love, indeed! What do you cold creatures out of the convent, with your crosses and rosaries, know about love—real love—the blinding fire in a woman's heart when she loves somebody so much that she would give her heart's blood for him—yes, and her soul itself if need be."

What else I said I cannot remember, for I did not know what I was doing until I found myself looking out of the window and panting for breath.

Then I became aware that Mildred was making no reply to my reproaches, and looking over my shoulder I saw that she was still sitting in my chair with both hands covering her face and the tears trickling through her fingers on to the linen of the table.

That conquered me in a moment.

SEIZED WITH REMORSE

I was seized with such remorse that I wished to throw my arms about her neck and kiss her. I dared not do that, however, but I knelt by her side again and asked her to forgive me.

"Forgive me, sister," I said. "I see now that God has brought us to this pass and there is no way out of it. You must do what you think is right. I shall always know you couldn't have done otherwise. He will know, too. And if it must be that disgrace is to fall on him through me—and that when he comes home his will find

But I could not bear to speak about that, so I dropped my head on Mildred's lap.

I heard the silence that followed—we heard the sound of footsteps coming up the stairs.

"Listen! They're here," said Mildred. "Get up. Say nothing. Leave everything to me."

I rose quickly and returned to the window. Mildred dried her eyes, got up from the chair and stood with her back to the fireplace.

"There is no sign of it in my door. I do not know which of us answered it, but I heard Father John step into the room, followed by three men in tall silk hats.

"Excuse us, my dear," she said, in an insincere voice. "These men are looking an extension for my house, and they wish to see your room. May they?"

I do not think I made any reply. I was holding my breath and watching Mildred's face. She made a pretence of glancing round, but I could see they were looking at Mildred. Their looks seemed to say as plainly as words could speak:

"Is it she?"

Mildred hesitated for a moment, there was a dreadful silence and then—may the Holy Virgin bless her!—she shook her head.

I could hear no more. I turned back to the window. The men, who had looked at each other with expressions of surprise, tried to talk together in ordinary tones as if in commonplace subjects.

"So there's nothing to do here, apparently."

"Apparently not."

"Let's go, then. Good day, Sister Mildred. So sorry to have troubled you."

I heard the door close behind them. I heard their low voices as they passed along the corridor. I heard their slow footsteps as they went down the stairs. And then, feeling as if my heart would burst, I turned to throw myself at Sister Mildred's feet.

But Sister Mildred was on her knees, with her face buried in my bed, praying fervently.

* * *

With this in my mind I returned to our boarding-house and found Christmas there, too, for on looking into the drawing-room on my way upstairs I saw the old actress, standing on a chair, hanging holly which the old colonel with old-fashioned courtesy was handing up to her.

They were making very like two old hens when they caught sight of me, and the old actress cried:

"Ah, here's Beauty!"

Then she asked me if I would like a ticket for a rehearsal or a rehearsal of a Christmas Eve of a Christmas pantomime.

* * *

The pantomime rehearsal being over I was thankful for the evening was cold, though I was so warm within when I became aware of a number of newsmen who were flying up from the direction of the strand, crying their papers at the top of their voices.

I did not usually listen to such people, but I was compelled to do so now, for they were all around me.

"Paper—latest edition—loss of the Scotia."

The cry fell on me like a thunderbolt. An indescribable terror seized me. I felt paralyzed and stood dead still, crying "Stop" to the people with the papers, and at first I made a feeble effort to do the same. But my voice was faint; the newsmen did not hear me and he went flying past.

"Paper—latest edition—wreck of the Sco-sha."

After that I dared not ask for a paper, literally I dared not. I dared not know the truth. I dared not see the dreadful fact in print.

* * *

As I entered the drawing-room the colonel was unfolding a newspaper.

"Here we are," he was saying. "Reported loss of the Scotia—capitalizing Antarctic Calamity."

I tried to run into the next nearest to the door, but the old actress made room for me on the sofa close to the tea-table.

"You enjoyed the rehearsal? Yes?" she whispered.

"Hush!" said our landlady, handing me a cup of tea, and then the old colonel, standing back to the fire began to read.

"Telegrams from New Zealand report the picking up of large fragments of a ship which were floating from the Antarctic seas. Among them were the bulwarks, some portions of the deck cargo, and the stern of a boat, bearing the name 'Scotia.'

"Grave fears are entertained that these fragments belong to the schooner of the South Pole expedition, which left Adelaide a few weeks ago, and the character of some of the remnants (being vital parts of a ship's structure) lead to the inference that the vessel herself must have foundered."

"Well, well," said the old clergyman, with his mouth full of buttered toast.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

"I Would Rather See the Canal Blown Up Than Give the British Control."--Speaker Clark

Striking Epigrams from His Great Speech in the House Yesterday.

"If we pass this repeal bill, control over our own canal is gone forever. Repeal means the practical abandonment of the Monroe Doctrine.

"Rather than surrender our right to complete sovereignty over every square foot of our globe-encircling domain, we will cheerfully face a world in arms.

"I have steadfastly supported the President until called upon to bolt the platform. This fight may public career. Many things are worse than being defeated for Congress, or the Speakership, or even the Presidency. One is to repudiate the platform.

"With those who assert I am seeking to disrupt the party, the wish is father to the thought. It may surprise these obsequious courtiers to know I am not a candidate for 1916.

"I would rather see the Canal blown up than give the British any control of it.

"Now may the God who nerved 3,000,000 backwoods Americans to fling their gage of battle into the face of the mightiest monarch; who guided Jefferson, who sustained Washington, who gave the victory at Yorktown, may He lead members to prevent this stupendous folly, this unspeakable humiliation."

"The question with these is which would be better for the Republicans—to so sufficiently vote with Mr. Wilson as to give him the canal—English victory, by uniting with a solid Republican support to the Clark-Underwood Democrats, save the integrity of the canal itself and the self-respect of the country in the frightened eyes of Mr. Wilson and all that England and the rainroads can do? Said a Republican Senator:

"To permit Mr. Wilson to surrender the canal to the English should and would mean the tearing to pieces of the Democratic Party. The office has way to bring the Republicans into power. On the other hand, were the Republicans to unite with Mr. Wilson and save the canal, the people are intelligent enough to give them credit for it. Also giving the Republicans credit for thus defeating the un-American and unpatriotic policies of Mr. Wilson would take the sting of giving them Congress this Fall and the White House in 1916. We would be rid of Democrats in all high places for a decade and more to come."

HELL GATE A "SUBSIDY."

"The canal cowardice of Mr. Wilson is offensive to what Democrats are voting with him. He put his anxiety to give way to England on the ground that he was afraid. His supporters, saving their manhood, say nothing about 'fear' but a great deal about 'subsidies.'

"To free the canal to coastwise ships would be a 'subsidy,' and they are against 'subsidy.' What is their single argument, the one word you get out of them when you ask them to explain their hold?

"'Subsidy!' If to free the Canal to coastwise ships be subsidy, then the millions spent on the Mississippi and Ohio, the millions spent in jetties and breakwaters and channel dredgings, the millions spent in lighthouses and coast triangulations and soundings are, and will ever be, subsidies. To allow Hell Gate was a subsidy. The very weather bureau is a subsidy.

"Were these supple folk who follow Mr. Wilson, to give the true argument some appeal to them, they would say "Patronage". With a Scotch thrift latent in his blood Mr. Wilson, after a year in office has three-fourths of the presidential appointments to make. He keeps these opponents in suspense night and day that as any shopman would keep his stock in trade in sight. The selfish system is not without its elements of strength.

EYES ON CERTAIN JOBS.

"Of course I'm going to stick to Mr. Wilson," said an Indiana statesman, his eye on certain offices within the White House itself.

"I come up for re-election this fall and I long ago learned when I went fishing to quarrel with the fish for who carries the bait."

Such narrowness as this Hoosier publicist can never be taught that he serves best himself and party who serves his country best, and that rightly understood patriotism and partisanship mean the same thing.

"There are scores of men, duly oblique sort at both ends of the capitol. These will vote with Mr. Wilson sell their congressional birthright for a mess of pottage. They will hurt instead of help themselves—and all be too thick to know it.

One fat little fool used a word in describing these double Arnolds, who are traitors at once to both their country and their party. He said there should be the name for a White House which cried out against the lobby to repeal and tariff, to become itself a lobby king and pay with offices instead of dollars to win American votes for England?

EXPECTS TO SUCCEED HIM.

What Congressmen have had recent occasion to call at the White House describe Mr. Wilson on "all worked up." In even a worse nervous case is that political leaper and tumbler, Secretary of State Bryan. Mr. Bryan is so fatuous as to think he can succeed Mr. Wilson. Also he expects to be elected presiding in 1916.

Only the other day when National Committeeman Woods of Michigan was in town the Washington Post quoted him as saying that the next Democratic candidate would go to Mr. Wilson unanimously. This view from Mr. Woods gave Mr. Bryan offence.

"Why! What does Woods mean?" he cried, commenting on the Woods interview to a senator. "Woods knows that the understanding at Baltimore was that Mr. Wilson would not seek a second term."

As an under-cover, but no less hearty, candidate for the next White House nomination, Mr. Bryan doesn't enjoy the present use being made of his name.

Men are saying that it was he who drew the Baltimore platform and wrote in "We favor the exemption from tolls of American ships engaged in sailing in the trade passing through the Panama Canal"; that it was he in proclaiming his Democracy and the party thereof who said: "I lay it down as a proposition, and I am prepared to defend it anywhere, that the representative who secures office upon a platform and then holds the office and betrays the people who elect him is worse than the man who embezzled money intrusted to him," and that finally it was he who announced: "I am unreservedly in favor of the bill advocated by the President to repeal tolls," and is now heartily in favor of the resolution (the gag rule limiting debate).

"SHOULD BE AMENDED."

"The bill should not be amended," and then they comment invidiously upon the tree tond qualities of one who can so quickly recolor his convictions to agree with an environment.

To serve a pro-English White House, Mr. Bryan will become pro-English. In that service, too, he is willing to reverse himself as to every position he ever occupied or swallow any sentiment he ever expressed.

These commentators on a Bryan, first right, then wrong stand, conclude by saying that as a President he would prove even more spineless than is Mr. Wilson.

Naturally, these quotations and these criticisms disturb Mr. Bryan, who, though a nonentity politically, is in no wise a political fool, and who cannot but feel that Mr. Wilson is not only killing Mr. Wilson and the Democratic party, but also and likewise killing Mr. Bryan.

Last evening, in an attempt to measure in advance the party havoc being wrought by Mr. Wilson's canal efforts to subordinate the United States to England, I counted up with two Democrats and a Republican, all members of Congress and each of them holding a representative of practical politics.

They took the Congressional directory and fairly agreed that, sticking to States and regions which might be considered safe grounds in the next election the Democrats would lose two of the three Democratic seats they hold from California, two of the four they hold from Colorado, three of the four they hold from Connecticut, thirteen of the twenty they hold from Illinois, twelve of the twenty-three they hold from Maine, two of the three they hold from Iowa, four of the five they hold from Kansas, the four they hold from Maine, two of the six they hold from Maryland, five of the eight they hold from Massachusetts, one of the two they hold from Michigan, three of the fourteen they hold from Missouri, the two they hold from Montana, two of the three they hold from Nebraska, one of the two hold from Nevada, six of the eleven they hold from New Jersey, thirteen of the thirty-one they hold from New York, nine of the eighteen they hold from Ohio, two of six they hold from Oklahoma, nine of the twelve they hold from Pennsylvania, the two they hold from Rhode Island, four of the eight they hold from Tennessee, one of the two they hold from West Virginia and one of the three they hold from Wisconsin.

At the Senate end an pro-English-Wilson result the Democrats will lose Thomas of Colorado and Shiveley of Indiana. While one-third of the Senate is to be chosen this Fall, it chances that but few consecutively are Democrats, which is lucky for the Democrats.

Figure it up—a House hopelessly Republican. A Senate hopelessly Republican. The Progressives and the regular Republicans united and 1916 presidency in danger.

That is the price to be paid for a bare-headed schoolmaster in the White House and a janus-faced demagogue at the head of the Department of State.

Wilson as Turncoat a Surprise to Paris

PARIS, April 1.—In calling upon Congress to repeal the Panama tolls exemption clause, President Wilson is seeking to break the promises of his party and opposing the wish of a very important section of his own supporters, as well as strong public opinion.

This view is expressed in the Journal des Debats by its New York correspondent, Pierre de Bacourt, who lays emphasis on the fact that exemption was voted by the House of Representatives, and points out that in a speech at Washington Park, N. J., on August 15, 1912, President Wilson supported the Democratic policy of exempting American coastwise ships.

"Hitherto," the correspondent says, "American Presidents have endeavored to adhere strictly to their campaign speeches, but Mr. Wilson has changed his mind without worrying in the least about what the people will think of his about-face."

Racourt also lays stress on the self-defence campaign made in support of the repeal by railroads "which will be badly hit if American ships escape the $2 a ton Canal tolls."

Spoils Won Fight, Declares Knowland

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Representative Knowland of California, in a statement issued here, made the direct charge that President Wilson had defeated the will of the people on the tolls question with the patronage club. He said:

"There are times when defeat is more glorious than victory. Personally, I would a thousand times rather go down to temporary defeat in a contest of this character, which so vitally affects the present and future welfare of the nation, than to win at the sacrifice of American rights.

"The result demonstrates the potency of patronage."

POLL OF SENATE SHOWS WILSON BEATEN THERE

WASHINGTON, April 1.—If the vote to repeal the toll exemption clause of the Canal law were taken in the Senate today there is reason to believe the President would be defeated by a majority of one vote, so close is the division of sentiment on this great vital question.

The are fifty-one Democrats and forty-four Republicans in the Senate with one vacancy from Alabama. A majority would be forty-eight votes. The following Democrats are understood to be ready to vote to sustain the canal act in its entirety and to vote to ratify the declarations of the Baltimore platform.

Thomas, Colorado; O'Gorman, New York; Ashurst, Arizona; Walsh, Montana; Martine, New Jersey; Martin, Virginia; Chamberlain, Oregon; Vardaman, Mississippi; Pittman, Nevada; Randell, Louisiana; Tillman, South Carolina; Smith, South Carolina; Smith, Arizona.

Mr. Myers, Montana, is doubtful, with inclinations to sustain the law.

LODGE WITH WILSON.

The Republicans said to be certain to vote with the President are: Lodge, Massachusetts; Root, New York; McCumber, North Dakota; Burton, Ohio; Brandegee, Connecticut; Gronna, North Dakota; Nelson, Minnesota; Page, Vermont; DuPont, Delaware.

This makes nine, exactly the number of Republicans now in the Senate who voted against the toll exemption when the bill was originally before the Senate.

The Republican leaders, realizing that they will be able to make expedient capital of the political split of the Democratic split on the toll question, are making every effort to maintain a solid vote as much as possible. This argument is having weight among the number of Republicans who otherwise might be inclined to support the President.

The defection of thirteen Senators would reduce the Democratic vote to thirty-eight, with the Republican vote for the President's demand as split at nine the total support of the repeal plan would be only forty-seven, or one less than the required majority.

WILSON STRENGTH 46.

If Mr. Myers will vote as it now believed he will, the total strength of the President would be reduced to forty-six votes.

These figures are estimates based upon the conversations of Senators in the cloak room and there may be a slight fluctuation one way or the other. The administration says it asserts the Senate is "cinched" by a majority of only two votes.

The debate in the Senate will be protracted. The general opinion is that the discussion will last from six weeks to two months, with the probability that the final vote will be taken about May 15.

Final action depends in great measure on the action taken by the Committee on Interoceanic Canals, which will take up consideration of the repeal measure next week. Senator O'Gorman of New York is chairman of this committee and he is the leading opposing Democrat to the President's policy. Senator O'Gorman's opposition, however, it is not believed that any attempt will be made to pigeonhole the measure, though it is not expected that any immediate action will be taken.

The other members of the committee are Senators Thornton of Louisiana, Chilton of West Virginia, Shields of Tennessee, Walsh of Montana, Thomas of Colorado, Owen of Oklahoma, Simmons of North Carolina, Brandegee of Connecticut, Borah of Idaho, Crawford of South Dakota, Works of California, Bacon of California and Page of Vermont.

Senator Borah, who is one of the best fighters of the Republican party, will be allied with Senator O'Gorman in opposition to the tolls repeal. The chief burden of leading the administration forces in the committee will fall upon Senators Simmons and Owen.

BIG PROTEST ON SURRENDER BY BAY STATE MEN

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Letters and petitions are still pouring in upon the three Massachusetts Democrats who voted for the Panama tolls repeal bill.

Congressmen Peters, Thacher and Gilmore, who voted for the bill are hourly receiving messages of protest from their constituents.

Congressman Gilmore wants to be Postmaster at Boston. It is no secret that he would prefer this berth to a second term in Congress. More than one constituent is asking whether this ambition has not influenced him in his vote against a specific plank in the Democratic platform and against the wishes of the majority of his constituency as expressed in letters to his office.

Congressman Peters recently had his brother-in-law, a Republican, appointed Third Assistant Secretary of state. He is deeply interested in having his former campaign manager, Joseph H. Lyons appointed United States Marshal at Boston, and other matters of patronage. Have these things influenced him in voting against the overwhelming opinion of a great majority of his constituents is the question that his colleagues are asking.

Congressman Thacher has important patronage problems which he would prefer to have settled to his own political advantage. Has this fact influenced him in voting against the majority of his colleagues from Massachusetts?

As against these Congressmen who are credited with being swayed by White House influence is the courageous stand of Congressman Murray of Boston.

Murray, as postmaster-designate at Boston has preferred to take his appointment in his hand rather than vote against principle.

When the vote on the bill was taken in the House the eye of almost every member was cast upon the gentleman from the Tenth Massachusetts. Would he, as a recipient of one of the choicest gifts within the power of the administration, presume to take a stand against the President?

The vote of Murray was watched even as close as that of Speaker Champ Clark, and when he voted "No," admiration for his stand was mingled with surprise on the part of weak-kneed Democrats. Proponents of repeal are now quietly intimating that Murray will be punished for his independence through the loss of the Postmastership at Boston. But Murray refused to be frightened at this prospect and voted for free tolls.

'WILSON SPLIT PARTY TO WIN,' SAYS GRAVES

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—It was a Pyrrhic victory for the President.

Pyrrhus, King of Epirus, walking over a field of the wounded and slaughtered in which he had been victor, sorrowfully exclaimed: "One more such victory and I am undone."

And well may President Wilson, surveying the broken ranks of Democracy and the limping and sorely wounded Democrats for whom the November elections have no healing, exclaim: "One more such victory and the Administration is undone!"

Grover Cleveland lived for ten years under the stigma of having divided his party upon an economic and financial issue, and lost to Democracy the control of the government.

But Woodrow Wilson has split his party to pieces upon a patriotic and commercial issue, and there are half a hundred Congressmen whose return to Congress hangs upon the November verdict of an indignant people.

DIVIDED DEMOCRACY.

For the little finger of Wilson is heavier in autocratic rule than the loins of Cleveland, and not even the governor's mansion of Champ Clark, or the coincident peace plea of Adamson can persuade the people of the party that there is not henceforward a bitterly divided Democracy upon the vital issue of the American spirit and the Anglophilist surrender.

"In the Autumn campaign," thundered James H. Mann, "and for ten years to come, from militan Republican and hopeful Progressive and the unwritten Democratic—from the lips of Hughes, Roosevelt and Taft—there will be flung into the teeth of a Democracy that has betrayed this betrayal of the defensive this betrayal of American rights and American interests!"

And in that day no Wilson-shriven soul of a truckling Congressman will trust the stern judgment of a people—the stern judgment of a people who, not easily aroused, but fired to indignant patriotism, know how to use their white ballots as a scourge.

For in this lamentable fall the Democratic President has lost more friends than he gained in the whole first year of his Administration.

DICTATORIAL DEMAND.

His dictatorial demand without explanation of reason, the insistent application of gag law and the final stern refusal (just before bartering "forever and forever" our treaty rights in the canal) to leave the question open to an amendment to save the interest and the self-respect of the Republic—all these, added to the emphasis of magnificent mass meetings of protest all over the country—in New York, in San Francisco, in Philadelphia, under the Liberty Bell—and to the almost solid protest of Irish and German-Americans, will tell in the future how fearful a price the President has paid for himself and for his party for the brief and passing triumph of today.

It was a day almost without a parallel for excitement in the political annal of the country.

At 8:30 yesterday morning the corridors of the House were crowded with nearly 1,500 persons, waiting for the doors of the galleries to open at 11. For nearly three hours they waited on the outside. And even on the inside they sat until nearly 6:30, nearly seven hours, without water and without food—waiting to hear one man speak—champ Clark, of Missouri, Speaker of the House, lion of Democracy and idol of the a sembly and of the people.

MANN'S GREAT SPEECH.

There were many great speakers during the day. Humphrey of Washington made a memorable speech against repeal, bristling with eloquence and points. In the whole debate from the beginning there was no speech more logical, more convincing and more unanswerable, saving Oscar Underwood's great argument, than that of James R. Mann, the Republican leader, battling for American rights and interests.

Sherley of Kentucky, speaking in answer on the President's position, paid Mann's speech the generous tribute of saying that it was "worthy of the best statesmanship of the republic." And the whole House rose at Mann in congratulation when the Republican leader resumed his seat.

Sherley made by far the ablest and most thoughtful speech on the administration side of the debate. He is a student and a fearless publicist, and when the time speedily comes will just as fearlessly assail the aggressive encroachment of the executive upon the legislative power.

No thoughtful man can deny that the vast bulk of the argument and the eloquence of the debate was against the repeal. If the speakers has been appealing to open minds and unbiased judgment the American cause must surely have won. But they were not talking to such an audience. During the whole great feast of reason and patriotic sentiment the Wilson majority livened or lolled—silent, set, stolid and servile—hearing no sound but the whispered order from the pale, lean scholar of the White House.

"SCHOLAR HAD BOTH."

If the Archangel had spoken with the Congress of Angels and of Men, it would have been the same.

For the Archangel also had neither patronage nor power in elections—and the scholar at the other end of the avenue had both!

It was a day of great oratory and of many ovations. But all the ovations faded and all demonstrations were eclipsed by the unparalleled reception given to Champ Clark. In the history of great occasions in the House of Representatives, from the beginning until this day, there was never man who, under such circumstances, received such an ovation, so superb and matchless a personal and official tribute as the great Missourian did today.

This was the man whom the multitudes had come to hear. This was the man who had filled the House and packed the galleries, who had waited from early morning to solemn eve to hear him. And when the old war horse of Democracy—the most majestic figure in either House—left the Speaker's chair and walked with stately step and lion mein—the incarnation of dignity and repose—to the open space before the desk—there was such a scene as no man had ever seen in that great hall before, and such as no man now living is ever likely to see there again.

CLARK THRILLS HOUSE.

With the whole wing of militant Republicans and Progressives upon his left, with the great troop of Democrats upon his right—facing a hostile majority of eighty-seven votes in a House in which he was the chosen chief—facing a division which might mean the loss of his office and the loss of his seat, facing the misconstruction and misrepresentation of those who had sought to set his party against his repute—but just now under the fire of furious: If impotent criticism, but standing loyal and consistent upon the broad platform of his party, fighting at heroic sacrifice against his party majority for the American spirit and the interest, the dignity and the honor of his country—the Speaker stood for one electric moment.

SHUBERT WINS MUNICE BOUT IN HOT BATTLE

By RINGSIDE.

Ten rounds full of the hardest kind of fighting, in which Al Shubert of New Bedford clearly earned a decision over Johnny Munice, Charlestown featherweight, in a meeting of the University A. C. of Cambridge last night.

Though defeated, Munice didn't lose anything and stood a hard beating without showing any sign of discouragement. All the way he was tearing in, and no matter how hard things were going for him, was willing and ready to take more.

The New Bedford featherweight, however, was too clever and skilful of ten rounds had all of the things. The decision for Shubert was popular, though a few of Munice's friends were inclined to kick.

Finney Boyle of Lowell had all the best of Kubec of Chelsea in a most popping his head off with a snappy left hook. Though game, Lee never had a chance, and did not get in more than a half dozen solid blows on the clever Boyle all through the battle.

BROWN BEATS THOMAS.

Mickey Brown of Malden had a practice bout in his mixup with Kid Thomas of Lawrence, and took the verdict by several rounds. Thomas looked like a novice against the clever Brown, and spent most of his time trying to get away from the latter's aggravating left. Once during the bout, the Lawrence fighter got in a solid wallop to the right to the ear in the fifth round, which floored Brown and made him very careful to keep out of the way thereafter.

The big affair of the evening, which came second on the program, started off with a rush, both youngsters running from their corners and getting busy without delay. Before things had been going a minute, Munice planted a beautiful one-two swing on Shubert's jaw, and the latter went down for the count of nine.

He came up however, as though nothing had happened, and bored in, but was unable to penetrate Munice's guard and took several more healthy lefts before the session ended.

Again in the second round Munice had the shade, smashing Shubert with vicious right hands to the head as the latter attempted to get inside. Shubert, however, managed to land a bunch of steamy kidney punches in this session.

In third round, the complexion of affairs began to change somewhat, the slow New Bedford boxer coming stronger all the time. He fathomed the Munice attack, and rushed in to constant clinches, where he ripping in several stiff kidney smashes before being tied up.

SHUBERT FINISHES FAST.

Toward the close of the battle the constant beating which Munice had taken began to have effect and Shubert was able to get him more and more often. Every rush meant a left to the face and a right to the body. Munice meantime managed to connect with a few healthy wallops, banders that rather mussed up his opponent's countenance, but the blows, while coming with healthy drawing cheers, did not tend to slow up Shubert or cut down his lead.

The last two periods of the battle were Shubert's by a block, he landing all kinds of punishment in the effort to put over a sleep wallop. Munice was too tough, however, and was pegging away right royally when the bell ended matters.

The members of Company E, 5th Regiment, have taken hold in good shape to make the opening boxing meeting night a big success, and according to the present outlook the house will be packed to the rafters. Sand dollars when Porky Flynn and Jack Twin Sullivan mix, wallops. Sullivan landed on Tom Casterlin and looked very fit. He declared that he is in good trim and would make the Boston battler move some to get away with a decision. Flynn also claims that he'll be better than ever, and is anxious to show that he is worth another shot at some of the leading white hopes.

COBB SAYS BASEBALL IS HARD TO MASTER

Written for the Boston American

By TY COBB.

WITH big league salaries soaring because of the invasion of the Federal League, which organization is endeavoring to make inroads into the heretofore private preserves of organized baseball, it seems as though an article on the game as a profession would be timely at least. McGraw once said to me when I was discussing this subject with the Giants' leader:

"If I ever had had a son, I would like to have seen him a ball player, because I think it is a good business. It keeps a man healthy in both mind and body, and it pays a young fellow more when he starts than almost any business he could break into."

I don't know that I would go so far as McGraw in desiring that a son of mine should play big league ball, but then, I have a son and "Mac" hasn't.

However, I will go this far. I will say that baseball has been a good profession to me. But, like most fathers, I am not particularly anxious that my son should follow in my footsteps.

Perhaps the reason for this is that I know how hard it is to make good in the big leagues, and how big a percentage there is against a boy becoming a star.

Anybody can see this when he stops to think that there are thousands of ball players in the country and room for only about four hundred among the top notchers.

The entrance of the Federal League into baseball will not increase the number of big league players by more than two hundred.

And I know that there are just as good men in the bushes and small towns as there are in the big leagues today, but they have never been discovered and therefore have never had a chance to make good.

Scouts and managers tell you that they cannot get good players—that there aren't any more left of big league calibre. The trouble is not that they do not exist, but that they cannot be found.

Successful Ones Are Well Off.

After a player has made good in the big league and established his position in fast company, however, I believe that baseball is one of the best professions there is right now, not only because of the money in it, but for other reasons.

Scattered all over the men in the majors today, and you will find players living well and driving automobiles who would be working in coal mines or cotton mills or at some other very unremunerative trade if they had not possessed the ability to play ball and the opening had not been offered them.

People will tell you that baseball leads to nothing, and that, after perhaps ten years of service, when he is no longer fast enough for the big leagues, a man has not builded anything for the future. They point to such players as "Bugs" Raymond and "Rube" Waddell. Raymond died drunk, while "Rube," without funds, is at present so ill that he is liable to die any day, even before this story is published, and is completely down and out.

There are no more "Bugs" Raymonds and "Rube" Waddells in the business now, because there is no room for them, and it won't be long before you will have heard of the last benefit being given for an old broken down big leaguer who was "a good fellow when he had it."

Ball players are making a profession out of the game. In the days of the "ball actors," it was regarded as the players' ace in a sport and a pleasant way to spend their time.

The Case of Matty and Plank.

In contrast to Raymond and Waddell, take Plank, of the Athletics, and Mathewson, of the Giants, who were really contemporaries of the other pair, but who have taken advantage of their opportunities and care of themselves and are still doing good service for their respective teams.

If you look back through the history of baseball, you will find that Plank and Mathewson were among the first to take baseball seriously and to look to the future. Neither one of these will need a benefit when he hangs up his uniform for the last time nor will he lack for a remunerative occupation.

Steady stars of this sort would have been good at almost any business they had turned their hands to. "Eddie" Plank has shown that he is a good farmer as well as pitcher, in the very fine place he has at Gettysburg, Pa., while Matty is busy with many interests outside of baseball.

The influence of these two men in changing the views of players generally toward the profession and improving the position of the ball players has been very extensive, according to my notions.

But let us take a look at baseball as a profession from the point of view of the man just horning into the big league. As I have said, once a player has been good in the majors, it is a great profession. No costly preparation is required for the game. Nearly all the big figures in baseball today have been poor boys without finished educations.

"Connie" Mack deserted the job of a hand in the shoe factory to take up baseball. He risked a lot when he made the change, and admits it himself, but declares that he put the move up to his mother, and she approved.

John McGraw was a news "butch" on trains up near where he was born in Truxton, N. Y. By "butch" I mean newsboy who sells papers, candy, etc., but they tell me John used to engage in a little baseball while laying over between trips until finally he got a chance as pitcher with the Wellesville club.

A college education is not necessary for a ball player to be successful, although many college men are coming into the big leagues every year, and I think they have quite the profession good. They generally make good players, too, if they have any natural ability, because they have been taught to think.

Third Cup Boat Is Named Vanitie

Vanitie is the name selected for the Boston candidate for the defence of the America Cup. The sloop is now well under way at the yards of George Lawley & Sons Corporation, Neponset.

The Vanitie is for Alexander Smith Cochran of the New York Yacht Club and is the only one of the trio owned by a single individual, the Resolute and the Defiance being financed by syndicates.

Mr. Cochran will manage his own yacht and will have Captain Bill Dennis and Captain Harry Haff associated in her handling.

The Vanitie, though she has but seven letters instead of the supposedly desirable, eight in her name, is pretty sure to show such speed that it will take a mighty fast craft to defeat her.

When she makes her first plunge and the yachting sharps have an opportunity to see her graceful lines and shining hull they may comprehend the significance of her name.

With the Pilgrim A. A. leading, 23 to 22, having won three of the five games, the Irish-American A. A. and the Pilgrim A. A. will clash for the sixth time tonight at the Boston Arena.

Although the Pilgrims have a one game advantage and have scored six more goals than the Winged Shield seven, the Irish-American boys will start this game as the masters of the "Pills" and are fully confident of being a double defeat on the Pilgrims this week.

As all the other hockey teams have disbanded for the season, the Irish-American and the Pilgrims, in order to receive any real practice, were obliged to line up against each other for the past week, and these encounters, although merely for practice, did not tend to diminish the keen rivalry existing between these two teams, but rather to increase it.

The swimming team of English High has required an invitation to compete in the eleventh annual championship meet of the Public Schools of Pennsylvania to be held in Philadelphia on April 24. The New and blue team will not go as a result of the new rule prohibiting schools from which the fake part in events that would make it necessary for them to remain overnight.

Thirty candidates for the Ringer Technical team are working out under Coach Linehan on Dudley Field, Cambridge, and a strong team is expected.

Captain Maloney of the English High baseball team has nearly a hundred candidates to pick his team from. The boys are holding practice at the Columbus avenue playgrounds. The veterans out are Hayward and Bulmer, pitchers; Cluffrey, first base; Maloney, third base; MacKenzie, Hall and McMannus, outfielders.

The Boston College High baseball candidates will report today for the first time at the Boston College grounds. Coach Donahue expects at least 200 boys to report.

The Tokiyama school baseball candidates will hold first outdoor practice on the school field in Allston tomorrow afternoon under Coach Chick McLoughlin.

NEW COXSWAIN IN HARVARD'S FIRST VARSITY

The Harvard varsity crews rowed down stream as far as the Charlestown dam and returned, making about nine miles in all. Both the first and second boats were seated the same as Monday, except in the case of the coxswains, who were switched in order to give each a thorough tryout.

H. L. F. Kreger, '16, coxswain of last year's freshman eight, occupied the coxswain's seat in the varsity. Hugh Gallagher, '15, who has been acting as coxswain since the rowing season began, was placed in the third varsity, sending Manly Sargent, '15, up to the second. Captain Reynolds believes that by this method the best man will be secured.

R. F. Herrick, member of the Harvard rowing committee, was present during the practice and accompanied Coach Wray in the Pup. Other graduates followed the crews in the John Harvard.

Emphasis is now being laid on getting the oars well covered in the water. Some of the men fail to get the blades buried in the water and thereby do not get the full benefit of their power.

A noticeable thing in the boat was the power from the use of a long, strong leg drive. The oarsmen have mastered this and are using it to good advantage. A few racing starts were tried, but were not very successful. There was a good deal of splashing and a noticeable check between the strokes.

The second crew went over the same course as the varsity. At last they seem to have recovered from their slump and are rowing better than ever. Captain Reynolds, on behalf of the crews, has accepted an invitation to hear Alfred Noyes, the English poet, speak in Boston. Noyes was an oarsman in his day.

Shamrock IV. Not Ready Before May

GOSPORT, April 1.—The delay in completing Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger, Shamrock IV., is even more serious than first thought, owing to the non-delivery of certain materials used in the construction.

The vessel will not be launched during April, as planned, and it is now well on to May before it takes the water. Consequently trials will necessarily be delayed. Drillers engaged in the construction of the hull are working in night and day shifts in order to make up lost time.

Floating Clubhouse for Hingham Y. C.

The Hingham Yacht Club has voted to purchase a small coasting schooner, with the view of using her as a floating clubhouse. The plan is to moor her near the shore, where she can be boarded from the club float.

It also is planned to sail her down to Marblehead for the week of the Corinthian Yacht Club races.

Boston Boy Hero of Big Athletic Tour

SAN FRANCISCO, April 1.—With their Australian and seven State records to their credit, the four athletes composing the American track team have arrived home, ready to compete again in ten days.

Among the records made was one in the mile run by James Power of the Boston Athletic Association, who enters the team left for America covered the distance in 4m. 13 2-5s., breaking Alfred Shrubb's mark of nine years' standing.

This is said to be the best time for the distance ever made by an American athlete on foreign soil and is significant because of Power's difficulty in getting into form earlier in the tour.

NEWSBOYS WILL REPORT MONDAY FOR PRACTICE

"Happy," the debonnair newsboy king,

Tells us today that the only thing Left for the boy who has not applied Is to wiggle along and get right inside.

By "HAPPY."

The biggest April fool joke of all will be on the newsboy who hasn't filed his application for the Newsboys' League by tonight. Today is the last day for sending in applications. Don't get stuck by not sending in yours.

Remember this, every Boston newsboy between ten and eighteen years is eligible. This is going to be a bang-up league and the boys in it are to have some red-hot baseball.

It's a brand-new thing and the time to get in is when the "getting" is good. Don't wait until it's too late. Don't go o sleep and miss out. If you haven't applied for membership in the league, do it now.

The next thing to remember is this: Be on Boston Common Monday morning, April 6, at 9:30 sharp, for three things.

First—To have your pictures taken for the Hearst-Selig "movies." You will all want to be in that deal.

Second—To be ready for the first baseball practice. You'll want to get a good start.

Third—You'll want to get your tickets to see "Matt and Jeff in Panama" at the Globe Theatre. There will be tickets for all the players. Nuff ced.

But for today, boys, remember this—If you haven't filed your application, get it in some time today. This is the last call.

Here's the blank for you to sign and send in for the Newsboys' League.

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

MACON, Ga., April 1.—In his scheme to follow the spring pitchers to work a full game, Manager Stallings found a stumbling block in the record person of Mr. Hub Smith Perdue of Gallatin, Tenn.

Mr. Perdue essayed to fool the Atlanta players in the last game with the Crackers at Macon Park, but he didn't fool them worth a cent. He had nothing to fool them with.

The result was that Mr. Perdue, after sweating through two innings, retired to his hotel and took off his spangles.

The first inning was "one," "pow," "swole," "ouch" (meaning soaked in the eye by pitched ball), now and "wicky," three runs came over the plate on four hits, including a two-bagger.

Mr. Perdue obliged for another round, but when our valuable third baseman, Mr. Hub Hoh, got knocked off his feet by a liner, the gallant Hub was asked by Stallings to retire.

GAME ENDED IN TIE.

Mr. Hub is not quite ready to go nine full innings, Perdue will get another chance next Friday or Saturday, when the Braves play at Valdosta, de Leon Park.

The game ended in a 6 to 6 tie, at request of the eighth inning, the battle being called early to allow the Crackers to catch a home train.

The Braves should have won it, but after time the stage was set for victory, but as has been the case in many of Boston's exhibition games, down here, the necessary walloping is forthcoming.

Little Joe Connolly had two more chances to drive in runs, but he failed dismally, and he has now joined the "I ain't a hitting" club, an organization of players under Stallings who cannot understand why the bases hits are so hard to get.

Quite a boatload of persons connected with the Boston club will leave here on Thursday by the fast steamer from Savannah to Boston. There will be five of them. Scout Tommy McCarthy, who has taken off many pounds of fat while scouring the Macon; "Scotty" Murphy, assistant secretary-treasurer at the South End Grounds; Jack Williams, official photographer; Dick Lewis, the former Harvard and Exeter catcher, who needs more seasoning and experience before he will be ready for the big show, and Walter Benell, who will be used to both things in the Connecticut League or somewhere before he can expect to break up with a big league organization.

DINNER FOR PLAYERS.

After the game Stallings hurried to his plantation in his automobile. It will be his last visit there until the championship season ends. He could also go to Madisonville to take banking arrangements for the season's stop.

He will join the team again very soon, and, of course, to North with it.

The shift in schedule by which the players will be able to get away from here on Friday instead of Sunday pleases all hands. Macon is all right, but after a month in a place things grow stale.

On Thursday night the Board of Trade will give a dinner to Stallings and his players. It is probable that some of our stars will be asked to orate.

Stallings Is Plantation Doctor

He Treats Ills of His Hired Hands

Known to Darkies as "Mr. Boss"

MACON, Ga., April 1.—George Stallings is manager of the Braves, it is true, but he is also proprietor, farmer and doctor. In the latter capacity negroes know him as Mr. Boss, and that's the way the Boston players address him now since he treated them on a recent visit to the plantation, where the negroes danced, sang and crooned their ills away about a week ago.

Stallings expects to be a doctor of real life as well pursuit, and his diploma from a Talladega (Ala.) medical school attests the skill of his medical practice.

Just Winter they were forty-four little boys here born in the negroes' cabins on the Stallings plantation.

"Got Mr. Boss?" was the word which brought the whole forty-four to the store. No other doctor ever visits the Stallings plantation when Mr. Boss is at home.

Lately, I charged, his patients, "Mr. Boss" always leaves a few dollars to make the event just a little bit happier.

Notes from Red Sox Camp

By JACK CONWAY

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 1.—Duffy Lewis takes great delight in working out at first base before the games in which the Red Sox engage. Duffy gives the "fans" something to talk about by the way he throws the ball from first base to the third baseman.

THE ball leaves Lewis' hand like a shot from a rifle and crosses the diamond never more than four feet from the ground. There is not a man on the Red Sox team who has a stronger throwing arm than George Edward.

HARRY HOOPER is a more accurate thrower than Lewis, but it is a question whether he is able to hurl the ball as far and at as great a speed as the Sox left fielder.

W. REIG is another young man who likes to position around the infield. Reig once played the infield for Pittsburgh and is at home while performing at third or second base.

LARRY GARDNER'S playing at third base has been one of the features of the Sox training season. Larry was never in better condition than he is now and he hopes to have a good season.

JIMMY CALLAHAN was anxious to have Gardner make the world tour with the White Sox, but he refused the invitation as he was desirous of being in condition to play the best ball of his career for the Red Sox this year.

HAROLD JANVRIN has been doing a great deal of work around third base in practice. Carrigan wants the Roxbury boy to become accustomed to the position so that he will be able to take Gardner's place in the lineup if the latter is forced out of the game with an injury.

THE RED SOX have some star utility men, too, for coming season and this should be a big factor in keeping them upon the league race. The New York Giants owe a great deal of their success to the high standard of the utility players whom McGraw always keeps on his payroll.

STEVE YERKES is playing an aggressive game at second base. Steve is full of "pep" and he keeps the rest of the Sox players on their toes all the time.

JOE BURNS and Mike McDonough, the powers that be in the Lewiston New England League Club, will remain with the Red Sox party until the last game in Columbus. They will then pack their little grips and "hike" back to the Pine Tree State, where they will start plans for this year.

TRAINING CAMP NEWS

DURHAM, N. C.—AMHERST TIED NORTH Carolina, 4 to 4, in the first game of a double-header here and lost the second tilly, 2 to 0, in 10 innings. Both games were called on account of rain, which left intermittently.

WASHINGTON, THE WASHINGTON AMERICANS were trimmed by the Brooklyn Nationals in their first defeat of the season.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA.—VIRGINIA WON from Syracuse by 11 to 1 in a loosely played game. Scott, who pitched for Syracuse, was easier, giving six runs. Gilbert, who pitched him in the fifth inning, was hit and Jones, who pitched for Virginia, held the game well in hand at all times. Each has his left settled.

PINEHURST, N. C., MARCH 31.—PART of the Detroit Baseball Club training in Texas, is expected to arrive at Pinehurst on April 2. Mathias, manager of the New York National League baseball team, said that Walter Johnson, star pitcher of the Washington team, would not be with the Nationals this season, and that it is known that the Boston franchise is estimated to be worth about $500,000.

TERRE HAUTE, IND.—STACK PITCHED nine innings for the Chicago Nationals and shut out the Terre Haute baseball club made in his attempt. Hours of work for the stick, making one hit.

HOUSTON, TEXAS.—THE NEW YORK Americans made it two straight from the Texas League champions by defeating Houston 5 to 2.

Veteran Travis Lost to Youngster

PINEHURST, N. C., April 1.—A battle royal for the qualification gold medal between young Filmore K. Robinson of the Dublin school and former International Champion Travis, characterized the record round of thirty-six holes qualification play in the fourteenth annual United North and South amateur golf champion-ship. The result is a win for the "youngster generation."

Tied at 77, in the opening round, attention was naturally attracted to the pair and a card of 80 to 81 for his opponent won the honors for the lad who is still in his teens.

RED SOX OPEN 3-GAME SERIES IN NASHVILLE

By JACK CONWAY.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 1.—The Red Sox arrived here this noon in thirty-two strong ready to open their three game series with the Nashville baseball team tomorrow.

Carrigan has not yet to test their strength this year against a real big league club and they were eager for the fray.

The entire squad is in excellent physical condition. Three members of the team with the exception of Carrigan have been practically idle since they left Memphis, but would get into the game if Carrigan would permit him to do so.

Nashville is represented by a fast ball club and should give the Red Sox plenty of opposition. The recent errors have been training since early March and are not the least bit backward in stating that they will give Carrigan a noble band to battle against.

TO USE TWO PITCHERS.

Strange to relate the doughty Red Sox players are not worrying. They even declare that they will take all three games from Nashville and will then be ready to invade new territory.

Carrigan asserted today that he would use at least two pitchers in each game against Nashville. In this way he will be able to keep his big staff of hurlers busy.

It is expected that "Boss Bill" will play Hay Collins and Hugo Bezdek in the two trump cards. Both of these men are in good shape and should be able to give the Nashville batters a fine exhibition of big league pitching.

The Red Sox rookies will receive plenty of opportunity to show their worth in the exhibition games. Carrigan is anxious to get a line on all of the recruits under fire before he starts to swing the big axe and grease the slide in the bush leagues.

SCOTT TO COVER SHORT.

Hemie Wagner is the only Red Sox player who is not here with the squad. The great shortstop decided that it would be best for him to remain at Hot Springs for another week, and take the mineral baths. Everett Scott will cover shortstop here and the "fans" are anxious to see him in action with a major league club. Scott is a big favorite in this city on account of his great playing here last year, when he was a member of the St. Paul club of the American Association.

The Red Sox will probably line up as follows:

Hooper, r. f.; Engle, lb.; Speaker, c. f.; Lewis, l. f.; Gardner, 3b.; Yerkes or Janvrin, 2b.; Scott and Casey, ss.; Collins and Bedient, p.

A Spring Suit and Afternoon Frock

Fully described by Olivette.

THIS smart afternoon frock, on the left, simulates in its lines the tailored suit. It is fashioned of the new supple moire relieved by a collar and vest of striped faille in violet and maize shades.

The cost is a Kimono, the fulness of which is gathered up in two wide tabs crossing on the chest to form the front revers. The ends of these tabs are drawn round the waist to be fastened on each side by an embroidered button of the same color.

A basque starts under the ends of the vest on either side and finishes in a swallow-tail effect at the back.

Of the vest only the smart lines of the Jocrisse collar and two waistcoat points below the waistline are allowed to show.

Vanilla brown serge is here combined with chestnut and white striped goline in this pretty little Spring suit, on the right.

It features the very short coat that is so becoming to slim figures and so suitable for Spring wear. Kimono lines are used in the little jacket and the sleeves stop at the elbow, where the chestnut and white goline is used for cuffs to match the little square collar. Flounces of plaited maline outline the neck and finish the sleeves.

The waist is piped in the striped material—and a single button accents the end of this piping.

The skirt is plaited—and has a plain panel in front trimmed by four buttons of the vanilla serge.

THE THRILLING STORY OF A GIRL WHO WON HER FIGHT FOR LOVE AGAINST TREMENDOUS ODDS

"You may go," Scott commanded. This to Crane, who stood open-mouthed at the sudden intrusion, but vanished now with all speed.

"So you," exclaimed the roiled champion of virtue, "are the devil who danced with my Girl and now don't want to pay. Well, you will, I guess."

"Your girl?" the millionaire inquired suavely, "I thought she was an orphan."

"So she is. But I'm her guardian, and a kind one, don't you forget it!"

"But rather neglectful of your duties, madam, I would say."

"Oh, you're smart, aren't you? Very clever! Well, you may fool young girls, but you won't pull any wool over my eyes. I've tried to lay eyes on you and now I'm here. I want to tell you you can't get away from me so easy. What's a few thousand dollars to a young woman's happiness? Why, this girl's whole life is wrecked. She'll just pine away and die!"

Scott glanced at this fading victim of his fervor, whose color just now was a blooming red. Her eyes dropped as they met his. She seemed ill at ease. If in no peril of immediate dissolution.

THE "FIXER"

She looked up timidly and ashamed. "I didn't want to come, Mr.——"

"Y-e-s, shut up!" shouted the gentle custodian. "I'll do the talking here!" Her voice rose to such a pitch that it might have been heard on Fifth Avenue and Scott demurred.

"Why, my good woman, you can do all the talking, but you will have to talk like a human being, or I'll——" He held up a warning finger and lag-stepped toward her—"I'll summon some assistance and have you carried down into the street."

"No, you won't!" she fairly shrieked under his very nose. "No, you——"

The door from the corridor was thrown open, and there appeared—the "fixer."

"Why on earth didn't you wait for me, Miss Wilson? I told you everything would be all right," Stuart explained. "Come away from here if you expect any satisfaction at all. This is no place to settle such things."

"Then, we'll settle them in the courtroom, Mr Stuart; here or in a courtroom. Do you hear me?"

"Now, my dear Miss——"

"Wait!" came a ringing voice. "Wait!" It was Scott's. "You had your chance, Stuart. Now, I'll take mine. This woman is an impostor. Not only an impostor, but a ridiculous one. She'll get out of here now while she has the chance, or she'll go out in the custody of an officer!"

He stepped quickly to the 'phone on his desk and lifted the receiver.

"What will it be, Miss—Wilson, home or the police station?"

"Home, Mis—ter Scott," she drawled in mock submissiveness, "but the courtroom tomorrow. Come, Estelle. This is no place for ladies."

"Nor for blackmailers," said Scott, and dropped the phone.

"Now, Mr. Fixer," he continued when they had passed out, "you can resume your negotiations."

OGRE AND PRINCE.

WHEN Gertrude reached the street with the imprint of Scott's barring kisses on her lips, she stood dazed. In the passing throng she saw many faces, other faces, honest faces, but from them all she shrank. To her eyes only one figure in gray, with a white carnation in his lapel and brown eyes glitter-

Each woman was an image in ecstasy, with a jostling finger of portent—a Catherine Wiggins, whom in a moment of childish pride and loyalty she had thought prudish and presumptuous. From these she flinched, too. They were more appalling than the image of the gray wolf for the pointing finger said Stop! and the silent voice cried, "Look out, girls! Look out!"

It was like some signpost at a dangerous crossing that she had ignored; she had gone on, and now disaster had come. She made her way aimlessly through the crowd, ignorant of locale or destination.

She longed to seek the refuge of her mother's arms and reveal the awful happening of the afternoon, yet she feared the consequences that such a confession would cause. She would not crush the little flower of happiness that had just blossomed in her home. No, she must go on and bear in silence. Her happiness, her peace of mind, were but little things compared to the happiness of her mother.

She should never have gone to luncheon with Scott in the first place, and yet—no, that wouldn't have been any solution, for she knew that if she had refused he would not have kept her in his employ.

She arrived at this true perspective of things, and while it did not cheer her, it strengthened her. Even the finger of scorn now was less disdainful, for her determination to conceal everything from her mother and return to work if worst came to worst, to continue the luncheons with Scott—clothed her in the mantle of a martyr. It was simply that she must make up her mind to bear his fatherly, and more than fatherly, advances or give up her position, and that she would not do.

These conclusions recalled to her the fact that it was pay day, and that she had not drawn her salary. She turned and hastened back to the offices where Crane gave her the usual order of the day—

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Mabel Herbert Urner's Great Series:

Their Married Life

Helen's Elation at Collecting Twenty Dollars Insurance Is Short Lived.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

"WARREN, aren't we insured? I thought you had fire insurance on the furniture?"

"Have."

"Then why shouldn't they pay for that mattress and blanket?"

"Yes, if you want to admit you were such a blooming idiot as to take an electric light to bed."

Helen flushed. "But need they know"——

"Now, we'll not try any of your tricks on the insurance company. They'll get the facts, understand?"

The blanket and sheets were ruined, the mattress and pillow damaged reflected Helen.

"How much could we get?" she ventured.

"Whatever the damage amounts to — somewhere around fifteen or twenty dollars."

Fifteen or twenty dollars! Helen considered. After all why should she mind admitting that to ease her toothache, she had used the electric drop light as a substitute for a hot-water bottle? The idea was at least ingenious.

However, it had been a disastrous experiment, for she had awakened to find the bedclothes charred and smoldering under the electric coils that she had thought so harmless.

"Well, if we make a claim we've got to make it now. What's the stuff worth?" Having finished his breakfast, Warren drew out a notebook.

"Two sheets—how much?"

"I think I paid two dollars apiece; they were hemstitched."

THE CLAIM

"All right; sheets, four dollars. Blanket, how much?"

"Oh, that was one of the fair Aunt Emma gave us. I don't know what she paid, but I know they were expensive."

"Then we've had them ever since we're married?"

"But they weren't worn at all," hastily.

"Well, we can't claim as new goods that we've had three years. Say five for the blanket. Now the pillow." Ignoring Helen's demur that the blanket was worth much more.

"Why, we had those pillows made to order with the mattress."

"Got the bill?"

"I'm afraid not," apologetically. "It's been so long."

"Good heavens! can't I ever drum it into you to keep your bills? Keep them where you can get at 'em, too! Well, about how much does a good pillow cost?"

"About—oh, with that art ticking at least five dollars."

"And we've had over three years use out of it—say four dollars for the pillow and pillow case. Now the mattress. I still have to have a new top—what'll that cost?"

"Dear, I haven't the least idea."

"Say ten. Ought to get it done for that. Now let's see—that adds up to seventy-three. I'll put in a claim for twenty—that's about fair. Don't touch the stuff—they'll probably send a man up to look at it today."

"What must I tell him, dear?"

"Nothing. He'll ask you what he wants to know. A small claim like that they'll allow without much question."

Although Warren carried both fire and burglar insurance, he was the first accident they had had, and Helen looked forward with mingled dread and excitement to the coming of the insurance adjuster.

He did not come until late in the afternoon. A young man, with shrewd eyes and an abrupt business-like manner. Helen led him into the bedroom, where she had arranged the burnt bedding, with the charred spots carefully displayed to the best advantage.

"How did this fire start?" as he jotted down some notes.

SAID HIM.

"I had the toothache," with a deprecative smile, "and I'd heard some one say an electric bulb could be used as a hot-water bottle."

The adjuster stared at her.

"Well, that's a new one on me. Then as he lifted the pink silk shade from the drop light by the bed "Was this the bulb?"

Helen nodded, her color deepening. "I should call that a pretty dangerous experiment," he said dryly. "We really don't have to pay this kind of a loss, but since it's a small claim I'll allow it."

"I'm sure Mr. Curtis wouldn't wish you to allow it if it's not regular," protested Helen stiffly, resenting his patronizing tone.

"Oh, that'll be all right, tell your husband to send around his policy, and we'll endorse the claim. Only hereafter, Mrs. Warren, I'd recommend the hot water bottle as safer."

When Helen showed him to the door, she tried to imply by her frigid "good afternoon" that she disapproved of his slightly facetious attitude.

Then she started to put away the burnt bedding. The sheets would do for the room's use, she collected, they might even be cut down for the maid's bed! And the blanket—by a little ripping it could be divided so that there would be enough for her bed.

And the mattress—after all would it need a new top? She was almost sure she could get that same thing at Warren's. And by matching the stripes a patch would hardly be noticed. And the pillow—she could patch that in the same way.

The joy of getting something for nothing is strong in every woman, and Helen was no exception. And now the thought that she was getting twenty dollars to buy new bedding, while she was able to make good whatever use of the old was highly gratifying.

Eagerly she counted over the possibilities of the twenty dollars.

She could get the two sheets for four dollars—for less if she waited for a sale. And the blanket—just last week she had seen one of those pale-blue French blankets, so much more attractive than this old-fashioned, pink-bordered one, for eight dollars. That would be twelve, and the half-yard of ticking to patch the mattress and pillow would be fifty cents. She would have over seven dollars left!

Relief was jubilant. It was a most satisfactory deal. The thought that it was not quite a fair one to the insurance company did not trouble her, for had not Warren made out the claim? And he always leaned backward in his honesty. If HE thought it was all right, surely she need not worry.

She was still planning what she would buy with the seven dollars, when Mrs. Stevens came. Helen had phoned her of the accident that morning, and now with keen feminine interest she had stopped by to talk it over.

NOT ENOUGH

Again Helen displayed the burnt bedding, and told of the claim of $20 which the adjuster had just allowed.

"Twenty dollars! Is THAT all you asked for?"

"Why, I can fix up the things for less," explained Helen, "I was just counting it out."

"Well for small claims like that everybody asks the full value. That mattress alone is worth $30. And you could say you couldn't match the ticking, that you'd have to have your whole set—box springs and all recovered."

Helen looked puzzled. "But I don't think they would have allowed any more."

"Oh, all the companies expect to pay big for small accidents. That's their best advertisement. You remember that centrepiece we burned? Weren't you at that dinner.

HELEN IS DEPRESSED

"Oh, no. It was the Thurstons. Well, Henry overturned a candle and burnt a hole in that Milan centrepiece—and clear through the table-cloth. I put in a claim of $25, and they paid it without a word. The centrepiece cost $18 and the cloth $7, so you see I got full value. And the table-cloth is just as good as ever, the patch will never show—a centrepiece always covers it."

The elation that Helen had felt over the $20 was now somewhat dampened. Should they have asked for more?

At dinner, she repeated to Warren the story of Mrs. Stevens' claim of the tablecloth that was practically as good as new, and for which she had collected full value.

Warren lay down his fork with a snort.

"Well, you're a FINE lot! Jove, I don't believe a woman knows what business honesty means. I'd trust the crookedest man I know a darn sight quicker than I would you or any of the bunch you run with. Overvalue a measly claim for the sake of a few dollars—eh?"

"But dear, if everybody does it," faltered Helen, "doesn't that make a diff-rence?"

"How? A thing is worth what it's worth, isn't it? If you swear to a false valuation, you're committing perjury, that's all. But I don't suppose that would phase you. By George, if they ever get on the witness stand with a lawyer—you'll be shown up, all right!"

Household Hints

When using drippings for making cake, add a few drops of essence of lemon or the juice of a lemon, and it will be found that this will not only remove the fatty flavor which makes so often have when made with drippings—especially mutton—but will very greatly improve the flavor.

If bright saucepans and kettles have to be used over a smoky fire, smearing a little grease over the bright part will prevent the smoke from blackening the metal. If washed after use in hot water, the pan will be as bright as ever.

Common snuff put into the chinks of a fireplace will drive away crickets.

Photographing an Avalanche

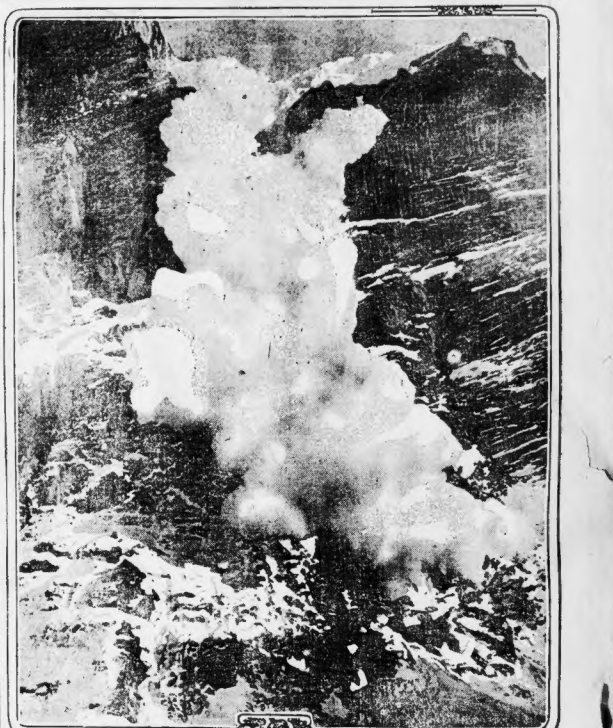
By Garrett P. Serviss

A wonderful picture taken by climbers in the Alps.



The Rush of Snow Dust from the Wetterhorn (12,139 Feet).

TO photograph a falling avalanche so close at hand that the photographer narrowly escapes being buried under its tons of snow is a feat that requires as much good luck as steadiness of nerve. We reproduce here a photograph of this kind, which perhaps has no equal in the world. It is an avalanche descending the precipices of the dreaded Wetterhorn, one of the most formidable peaks of the Alps, well known by sight to all visitors to Switzerland.

The falling mass, curtained with clouds of snow produced by its own plunging descent among the broken rocks, is thousands of feet in length. It has broken away from the overhanging front of the Huhnergutz glacier, whose white wall of ice is seen in the background at the top.

The wonderful picture was made by a party of English climbers making their way along the foot of the Wetterhorn up to the Great Scheidegg. Suddenly they saw an avalanche beginning almost, as it seemed, directly over their heads. They tore open a knick-sack containing a photographic camera and then ran for the nearest elevated rocks. They got into a safe position in time to snapshot the avalanche before its roaring head had quite reached the bottom of the mountain before them.

Then it shot across the depression, and leaped up the opposite slope, creating a draught of air so powerful that it tore out by the roots some of the low bushes growing in the crevices of the rocks. The party was involved in a blinding, whirling storm of snow, which was so finely powdered that it filled their eyes and ears and even the pockets of their coats. It choked their nostrils so that they had to fight for breath. When the avalanche ceased, through exhaustion of the supply from above, the snow cloud quickly cleared off, the sun came out, and the party looked upon one another in amazement, for they were cloaked with glittering snow, while all their baggage was deep buried, and had to be dug out. The snow had been driven with such force that it penetrated the texture of their garments, and required long efforts for its removal.

This strange power of an avalanche to create a tempestuous whirl of wind around it and to drive the air ahead of it as if it were a solid object has often been observed in the Alps, and some of the facts known about it seem absolutely incredible. In many cases the wind of an avalanche has not only uncoofed houses, but lifted them bodily from their foundations and crushed them by hurling them against the mountain side. In the great avalanche that buried the well known Gemmi Pass in 1836 men and cattle were blown before the advancing mass like autumn leaves. The front of the descending ice and snow was so broad and deep that the air could not, so to speak, get out of its way fast enough, and was therefore packed and driven straight ahead. The stairlieffe of the compressed air became so great that it hurled about everything that lay in its path with the most capricious exhibitions of energy.

Incredible as it may seem, men have sometimes ridden down a mountain side on an avalanche and escaped with their lives. Thus happened, for instance, once on the Matterhorn when two Austrian climbers, Herren Lorria and Lammer, unwittingly stepped upon an avalanche that was about to start. Down they went with it, were buried in the snow and now tossed upon its surface. At every change of slope they were shot up in the air. They got tangled up in the climbers' rope by which they were tied together, and one of them was nearly choked to death by it. One of them lost consciousness, and did not recover his senses until twenty-one days afterward; the other kept his senses throughout the whole dreadful experience. Both were terribly injured, but both eventually recovered. The perpendicular height of their fall, which, of course, was a sloping one, was about 800 feet.

An Easy Way to Get Fat and Be Strong

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on drugging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods, which only results in indigestion, or following some foolish physical culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You must get at the cause, and until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

Thanks to a remarkable new scientific discovery, it is now possible to combine into simple form the very elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This master-stroke of modern chemistry is called Sargol, and has been termed the greatest of drug-builders. Sargol seems to have the power to literally soak up the fattening elements of the food and pass them into the blood, where they are carried to every starved, broken-down cell and tissue of your body. You can readily picture the result when this amazing transformation has taken place and you notice how your cheeks fill out, hollows about your neck, shoulders and bust disappear and you take on from 10 to 20 pounds of solid healthy flesh. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient. Your druggist has it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied, as per the guarantee found in every package.

Caution—While Sargol has given excellent results in overcoming nervous disorders and general stomach trouble, it should not be taken by those who do not wish to gain ten pounds or more.

Monis Cabinet Called in Graft Probe in Paris

PARIS, April 1.—The arm of graft inquiry resulting from the assassination of Gaston Calmette, the journalist, by Mme. Caillaux, wife of the former minister of finance, reached still further today. Members of the cabinet, headed by Premier Monis in 1911, were called before the parliamentary graft investigating committee to testify relative to a charge made by a newspaper that Henri Rochette, a notorious swindler, openly tried to buy delay of the law.

According to this newspaper Rochette, although under arrest, was promoting a naphtha company by which he hoped to make quick profits of $2,000,000. He sent M. Du Mesnil to a member of the Monis cabinet offering a part of these profits to any member of the government influential enough to secure a six months' adjournment of Rochette's trial.

Ralph DePalma will drive a Mercedes in the 500-mile race at Indianapolis. He has just completed arrangements whereby he will import a car for this particular event. DePalma has just received his prize money for the Vanderbilt Cup and Grand Prize races which were held in Milwaukee in 1913. It will be remembered that in the Grand Prize race DePalma met with a very serious accident which confined him to the hospital for many months Milwaukee, having suffered a financial loss on the races, decided to make good the prize money until a short time ago, when, it is understood, certain individuals in that city contributed enough money to pay the cash prizes that were offered in both events.

The entry list for the Indianapolis race has been increased by the addition of three Mercer cars. Pullen, who drove a Benz race at Santa Monica, Spencer Wishart and Caleb Bragg will undoubtedly comprise the team of drivers.

MILWAUKEE, April 1.—Milwaukee women have a new fad—face powder tinted to match their gowns. This new vogue has a tremendous following. Every department store in the city has recognized the new demand for complexions tinted to match my lady's silks, just as in the East colored wigs are worn to match costumes.
Just now lavender is the favorite for evening wear. Sweet pea shades of red, pink, violet and purple, mandarin yellow, sevres blue, cypress green, putty color and almond are popular.

"There Has Been No Bargain With England," Says Mr. Wilson

But, Bargain or No Bargain, England Will Be the Gainer and the United States the Loser by the Action Mr. Wilson Is Trying to Force Congress to Take

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

To the Washington correspondents who asked him if he had made a bargain with England before he sought to force Congress to repeal the free tolls provision in the canal bill, Mr. Wilson said:

"Of course, that answers itself. It is just the crowning insult of a number of insults which have been introduced into this debate."

Mr. Wilson apparently regards every speech in Congress which is adverse to the administration as a personal insult. He has given his mandate that the free tolls provision must be repealed. If Congressmen do not obediently yield to his will he regards their conduct as insulting.

Mr. Wilson has a great deal to learn about the office to which he has been elected. Apparently he has a great deal to learn regarding the government of the United States, concerning which he has written many volumes.

The government of the United States is divided, as Mr. Wilson ought to know, into three departments—the executive, the legislative and the judicial.

IT IS THE DUTY OF THE LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT TO MAKE LAWS FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES.

It is the duty of the President to enforce those laws.

When the President forgets the limitations of his office and undertakes to direct Congress how to pass laws he should not be offended if certain members of Congress resent his action.

When he demands that the majority party in Congress pass laws whose passage would be in direct violation of their party pledge he should not be surprised if the language of the leaders grows bitter.

And when he demands that Congress pass laws whose passage will offend the vast majority of patriotic American citizens he must expect that things will be said of him which will not be pleasant to hear.

Mr. Wilson is particularly grieved over the accusation that he has made a bargain with England.

He says there has been no bargain.

He denies that any arrangement has been made between him and any representative of Great Britain looking toward British backing for his Mexican policy of watchful waiting in return for the administration's support of the thoroughly British canal policy.

Mr. Wilson ought to know what he has been talking about.

But what does it matter whether there has been a bargain or not?

Could Mr. Wilson have worked harder for the repeal of the free tolls provision than he has even if he were tied hand and foot by a deal with England?

Would American commerce be any less menaced by the threatened repeal of this provision if Mr. Wilson HAD bargained with Great Britain?

Would the pledges of the Baltimore convention be any less flagrantly violated by the legislation Mr. Wilson demands if he had made a cold-blooded deal with a representative of the British crown?

In asking Congress to repeal the free tolls provision, Mr. Wilson intimated that by so doing it would greatly assist his negotiations with foreign powers.

Whether he intended to do so or not, he led the majority of Congressmen who heard him to believe that serious trouble might follow if American shipping were not crippled by the enforcement of tolls.

To the credit of a large number of Congressmen, they replied that if peace was to be had only at the price of British interference in American government they preferred something else.

Now it appears that Mr. Wilson has no fears of war in his mind.

He was actuated only by a desire to repeal the free tolls law because of his belief in the sanctity of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

As to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, there were two opinions. A large number of able Americans, including ex-President Taft, Senator O'Gorman and Oscar W. Underwood, believed that the treaty would not be violated by admitting our ships to the canal free of tolls.

As to the sanctity of the Baltimore platform, Mr. Wilson was silent. There was only one opinion about that. Despite Mr. Wilson's eleventh-hour assertion that its clauses are contradictory, every man who had a hand in drawing it, INCLUDING WILLIAM J. BRYAN, was of the opinion that it demanded that our coastwise ships be admitted free to the canal.

It is difficult to see how the British construction of a disputed treaty becomes sacred, when the universal construction of a party platform is not.

It is hard to understand how a platform can become contradictory when its meaning is perfectly plain, while a President's utterances are not contradictory when at one moment he appeals for obedience on the ground that he needs help for his foreign negotiations and at another moment he says that he asked obedience only because of his belief in the sanctity of treaties.

We do not think Mr. Wilson has been insulted by Mr. Knowland or any other of the speakers on the floor of Congress. We do think that the American people have been insulted by the calm assumption that in any dispute with Great Britain the American people must necessarily be wrong.

It makes little difference whether Mr. Wilson has made a bargain or not. The fact is that he has taken the English railroad attitude—the attitude of Root and Carnegie—in a controversy on the other side of which are the people of the United States.

The President of the United States is elected to uphold the honor and dignity of the United States. When he seeks to enforce the passage of laws which will do irreparable damage to a very considerable part of the business of the United States he should take with good grace the frank expression of opinion about him by Congressmen who are courageous enough to speak the patriotic sentiment of the American people.

MAKING OVER UNCLE SAM

Jackson 100 Years Ago

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

ONE HUNDRED years ago General Andrew Jackson had his famous fight with the Creek Indians at the "Horseshoe Bend" in the State of Alabama.

It was one time when the horseshoe wasn't lucky—to the red man—although it was a red-letter day for "Old Hickory," a by no means unworthy prelude to the glorious 8th of January, 1815, at New Orleans.

Of the various Indian tribes that were to be found in the North American Continent when the white man first tucked its shores, the Creeks were, with the single exception of the famous "Six Nations," of New York State, by far the most formidable. In fact, they might well have been called the Iroquois of the South.

In 1813 the country was startled by the shocking massacre at Fort Mimms, in which the entire garrison, including the defenceless women and children, were ruthlessly put to death. That atrocious piece of work thoroughly aroused the people, and in looking around for some one who would put a quietus upon the red men, they were fortunate enough to pitch upon Jackson.

Undertaking the task with the vigor that always characterized him, Jackson drove the Indians from place to place, and finally cornered them at a point in Alabama known as the "Horseshoe Bend."

With consummate skill Jackson so placed his forces as to cut the Indians off from every means of escape, and then, falling upon them with his frontiersmen, literally annihilated them. Over six hundred of the red men were killed on the spot. The wounded were few in number. Jackson told his backwoodsmen to aim true—and they obeyed him.

Every reader of American history remembers with mingled sorrow and pride the story of the old Chief Weatherford, the greatest of the Creek leaders. Appearing suddenly before General Jackson as he sat in his tent surrounded by his officers, Weatherford, erect as a Norwegian pine, folded his arms and said:

"I am in your power; do with me as you please. I have done the white people all the harm I could. I have fought them, and fought them with all my power. My warriors are all gone now, and I can fight no more. When there was a chance for victory I never asked for peace. There is none now, and I ask it for the remnant of my people."

The battle-scarred old chief stalked sadly out of the tent and disappeared in the forest, and along with him vanished forever the power of the Creek Nation.

Might Have Been, but Wasn't

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

WHEN Warren found the Yankee troops entrenched on Bunker Hill
And fired with a belligerence that bode the British ill,
He might have said: "Don't stand your ground! You know it's not your own.
You're merely lowly vassals of King George's mighty throne.
This blustering talk of liberty is very indiscreet.
Take my advice and you'll lay down your muskets and retreat."
But not a single history that we have ever read
Records that the foregoing were the words that Warren said.

When Paul Revere went galloping o'er valley, hill and plain
To rouse the farmers up to chase the redcoats down the lane,
He might have cried: "Get up, you folks, the British troops are here;
When they come marching down the road all hands turn out and cheer.
They've come to drive you from your farms; their bullets soon will sing
Around our ears, but what care we? It all will please the King!"
But not a single history says anything at all!"
Of the remarks that we have here attributed to Paul.

If Paul Revere and Warren were in Washington today,
They MIGHT perhaps be made to see the error of their way.
They might be made to understand that it is more polite
To give in to Great Britain, be she wrong, or be she right.
They might regret the things they did and tell their English friends
That if another war should come they'd try to make amends.
But somehow I've a notion that if they were in the game
At present, their behavior would be very much the same.

Manners in Public

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED

Author of "The Etiquette of New York Today."

IN these days of rush and hurry, in crowded streets and other public places, it may not be as easy to bear one's self with the same courtesy, or even good humor, that is practiced among our friends and in drawing rooms; but this is the test of our good manners.

Dignity, self-respect and good principles require that we should not fail in courtesy wherever we may be. There should be an effort not to do anything that might be an inconvenience to others.

It is not good manners for three or four persons to walk abreast. One or two should step back and allow others to pass, otherwise there is not space for pedestrians. People should now stand in groups talking in the street and thus preventing others from passing.

A man lifts his hat when making this apology to a woman. He raises his hat when offering any civility to a woman, such as giving up a seat in a public conveyance, or opening a door in any public place, or picking up a purse or anything that has been dropped. These civilities are acknowledged by a slight bow and the words, "Thank you." These are not trifling courtesies. They are important and imperative.

* * *

It is not good manners to loiter, looking in shop windows; one should walk on quickly from place to place.

It is provincial for a man to walk between two women. His place is at the outside of the pavement. He should not take a woman by the arm or elbow, unless absolutely necessary on a crossing to protect her from sudden danger.

Voices should be restrained in public. Good manners demand that private affairs should not be discussed within the hearing of strangers. The mentioning of names of absent persons, or any gossip about others in public is a breach of etiquette. The worst manners are those of persons who seem to wish to attract attention by loud talking, laughing or making demonstrative gestures.

A well bred person is polite to all sorts and conditions of people. By the very delicacy of his courtesy he avoids annoying or offending anyone. The neglect of politeness in matters which seem trivial reveals the character and training of the individual.

The manner of doing a very simple action reveals good breeding or the lack of it. The constant observance of the apparently trifling politeness of life leads the way to a higher level of manners and character.

For England, for the Canadian Pacific, for Old John Bull

But NOT for the United States of America

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

England, an island nation, NOT self-supporting, lives by shipbuilding and trading.

England does not want this country to become a rival in shipbuilding and trading. Therefore England opposes free Panama tolls for American coastwise shipping.

FREE TOLLS WOULD BUILD UP AMERICAN SHIPPING.

The Canadian Pacific Railroad is one of the greatest and most powerful financial organizations in the world. The Canadian Pacific carries freight from ocean to ocean, and is owned chiefly by Englishmen. That railroad makes money so fast that recently it has added one hundred and eighty millions of water to its stock.

The Canadian Pacific is deeply interested in extortionate freight rates across this continent.

Free Panama tolls for our coastwise shipping would reduce the charges of freight from ocean to ocean. The Canadian Pacific does not want lower freight rates, and therefore opposes free tolls for our ships. In this opposition the Canadian Pacific is the partner of our own American railroads, anxious to keep up freight rates, and partner also of our President, Mr. Wilson.

Mr. Wilson spoke for free tolls for American ships. He pledged himself to free tolls—when he was a candidate. He ran on a platform pledging the free tolls.

Now he announces the very NEW American doctrine that we cannot settle foreign questions unless we permit England to dictate our home affairs, including the Canal question.

It is an interesting situation—the American railroads, the Canadian Pacific Railroad and the English owners of the Canadian Pacific combining with the President of the United States to deprive American ships of free tolls in an American canal, and thus making lower freight rates impossible and railroad extortion a permanent feature of industrial life.

The people will soon know what the United States Congress proposes to do about it.

The President, moved by strange influences, including the persuasion of his publisher, the snob whom he sent to London, has broken his pledge to the people, forsaken and betrayed his pledge to uphold the platform. He invites Democratic Senators and Representatives to join with him in the extraordinary treachery to American interests.

A fox once had his tail cut off in a trap. Very cunningly, he persuaded some of the other foxes to cut their tails off and be like him. Those that were persuaded regretted their folly when they thought it over.

Members of Congress who join with the President and accept his invitation to cut off their political tails will feel foolish when they come to think it over.

They will have helped England, keeping back the American shipping industry.

They will have helped the Canadian Pacific Railroad, keeping up extortionate freight rates across the country.

They will have filled with pride the British bosom, which will say: "I may be shot to pieces by the Boers, and made to look foolish by a handful of left-footers in Ulster. But I can boss and bully Uncle Sam, thank God!"

Strange changes in our national life, indeed.

We as a nation of four millions were able to defy Great Britain and maintain our rights.

And as a nation of a hundred millions we are told by the President that he cannot manage his foreign troubles unless we allow England to ignore our rights.

And the Congress is asked to admit that this nation has been dishonorable in regard to the canal and to repeal a law based on equity, common sense and national welfare.

Pleasant for England and the Canadian Pacific, undoubtedly, but humiliating for the United States.

It is some comfort to know that the Congressmen who join the President in this treachery, for the sake of patronage, will have many leisure days in which to think about the fox with his tail cut off.

Eighty-nine Kinds of Atoms

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q.—"IS the vortex theory of matter now held by scientific men?"

A.—No. The discovery of basic electrons made the vortex hypothesis obsolete. And it had not been widely accepted from the start.

A fair idea of the theory that molecules are made of vortices may be had by watching ascending rings of smoke from the exhaust of locomotive smokestacks. As they rise in the air particles of carbon revolve around the thickness of the rings, which do not break, but expand until they become invisible from rarity. These were taught by Kelvin to be possible atoms; and the interlocking of rings in different proportions made molecules.

This doctrine was very complex, and this cumbersome property of rings prevented its general adoption. Kelvin was careful to put it forth as a mere working hypothesis.

Electronic base of all matter: This met almost universal approval when published by J. J. Thomson in excessively rapid revolution, singly and separately, each in its own orbit like that of the planets around the sun; and not related to each other as they would be in a ring.

The eighty-nine different kinds of atoms now known to advanced chemists are made up of different numbers of revolving electrons, moving with set and forever fixed specific speeds for each elementary atom, at different directions for different kinds of atoms, and at varying distances. Thus number, rates, distances and directions of electrons determine what particular atom shall appear in cosmic space.

Here it is again: Nothing exists but electrons. I have published this daily in some part of the world since 1900.

A good many of us who cast bread upon the waters keep the angel cake for our own use.
